Sewer line extension is a go

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

A project for expansion of the Haliburton sewage treatment plant and a sewer line extension will soon go to tender now that approval has been granted by the Minister of the Environment.

Minister Jim Bradley approved funding for the project last week after deliberating over recommendations submitted to him by Robert Winson of the ministry's Environmental Assessment Branch.

Bradley determined there are enough safeguards to prevent detrimental results of increased outflow of sewage. So he will not "bump up" the project to an Individual Environmental Assessment, as requested by property owner associations of the Lake Kashagawigamog chain.

Many property owners are concerned an extension of the sewer line to service resorts and businesses along the north shore of the lake will cause further deterioration of water quality.

"Obviously the Hon. Jim Bradley believes we're making the situation better, not worse," Dysart et al Reeve Bill Davis told The Echo on Friday. "It's a relief, because we've had a few setbacks here. We've really had our share of them."

"A normal study report must be done, and work will be pending its completion and approval. But the wait is over."

This fiscal year, Bradley has allocated a $1-million grant to cover costs of setting up the expansion, says Davis. The work will probably start next spring.

Estimated gross cost of the project is $6.54-million. This covers both extension of the sewer line and expansion of the treatment plant.

The plant must be expanded because it has been "at capacity" for the past two years, and effluent will increase as a result of the extension.

Dysart will pick up $75,000 (five per cent) of the overall $1.492-million which must be raised through resort owners to cover their share of costs.

Some of this money will be recovered because expansion will allow more hook-ups within the village, says Davis.

"The overall cost has jumped minimally," he says.

When told the resort owners' share still seems steep, Davis responds "It is and it isn't. Not much has changed from the original estimate." As for the expansion, "we would have had to do it anyway."

A meeting with resort owners, consultants Totten Sims Hubicki, and environment ministry officials will be held this week. "We will meet with all those concerned," says Davis. "There has obviously been an increased monetary strain because of the delay."

This is only the second time funding has been approved for a project which primarily benefits commercial properties. And it will probably be the last, says Davis.

He's relieved about the approval, and happy that the ministry has researched the matter. "It's tough to deal with all parties concerned. The bottom line is, will the project make the problem worse or better?"

Resort owners are wary of expansion promises

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

Some resort owners aren't yet ready to crack open the champagne to celebrate approval of the Dysart sewage treatment plant expansion.

"Frankly, it smells more like an election than it does sewage," says Wig-A-Mog Inn owner Art Ward. "My only advice to the acting reeve (Bill Davis) is he get the cheque up front because promises mean nothing."

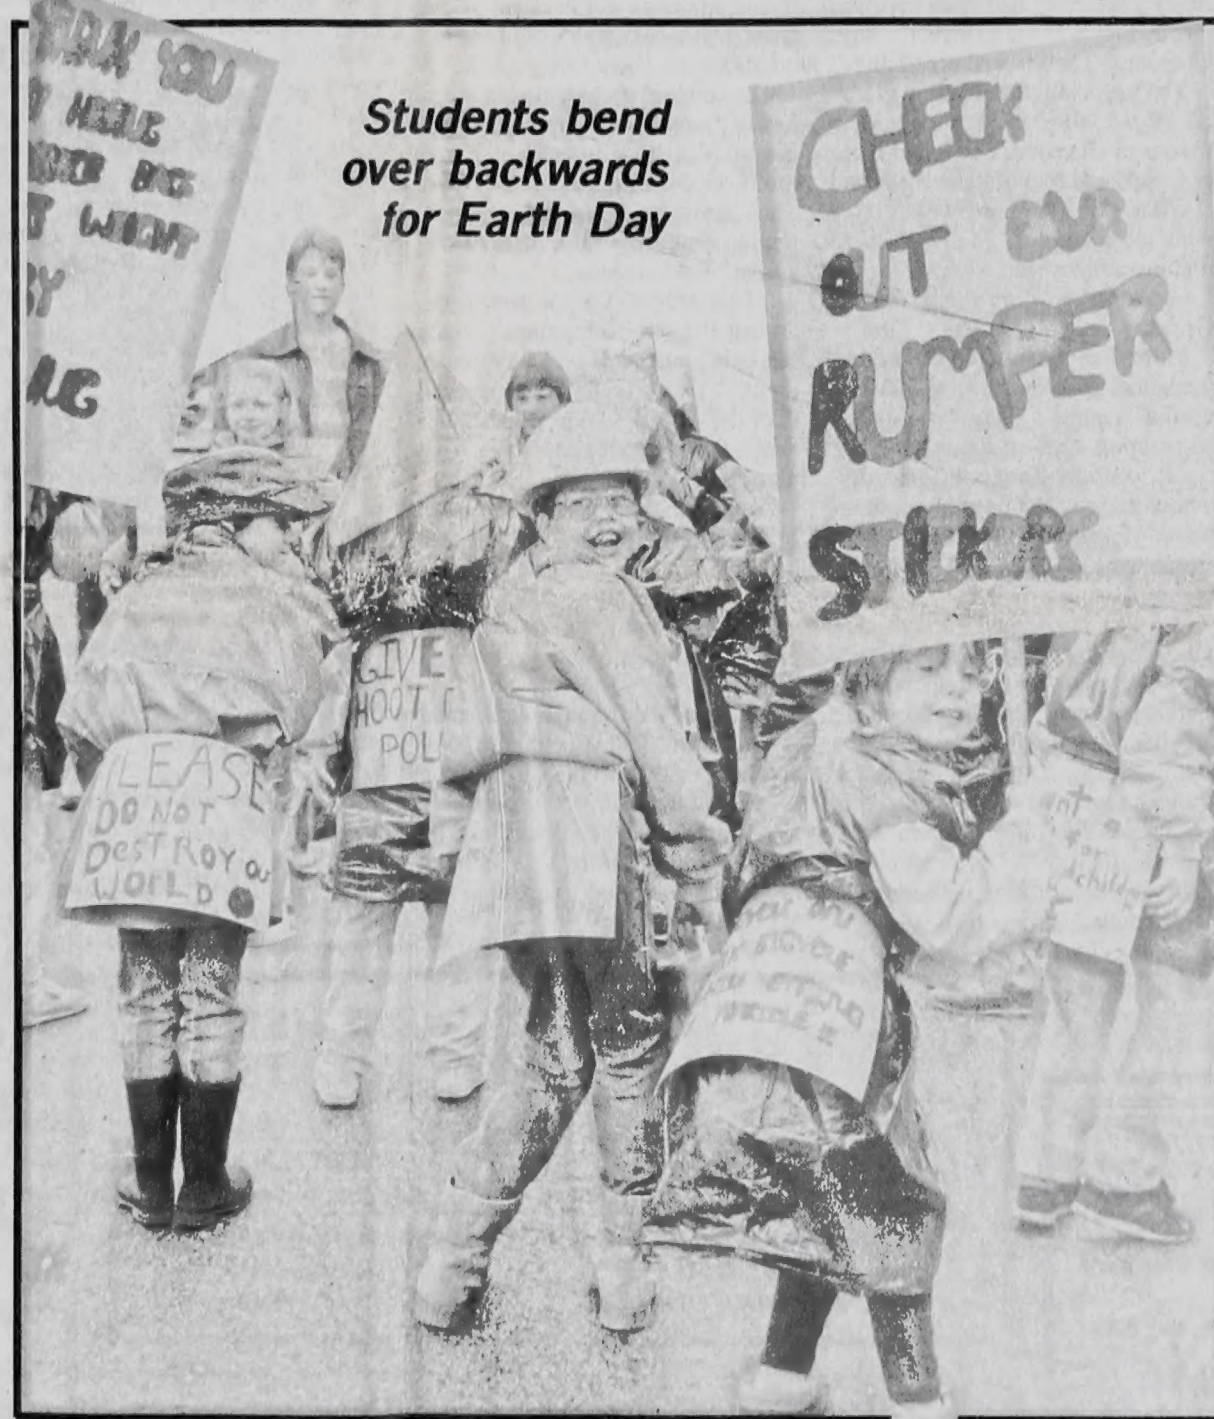

Area resort owners are currently struggling to keep their heads above a large capital expenditure which will not provide a quick return. It's frustrating, there's no question."

And construction costs have risen during the wait for Ministry of Environment funding approval of the sewer line extension proposal.

It was last estimated Ward must pay $400,000 for his share of the sewer line. "We know the costs will be much higher than that," he says.

There is still a long, arduous process before construction can begin. The municipality will tender the job, "and when we hear back they'll determine the final costs of the job."

There was no end to the creativity displayed by J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School students when they marched through downtown Haliburton on Friday.

With their colourful costumes and slogans, they were sharing the message that we need to work together to make this planet a cleaner, healthier place to live.

water because the provincial government has cut much-needed grants to the tourism industry, Ward told The Echo on Friday.

Business "has been a disaster" because provincial budget cuts have meant less advertising to promote tourism in Ontario.

As a result, "there has been a $3.5-billion drop in tourist spending in the past year," says Ward. "It (sewer extension approval) comes at a difficult time for us as operators because tourism is down. It makes it hard for us to hold up our end of the bargain."

Resort owners must contribute to the overall $6.54-million cost of the project, which involves extending the sewer line to service resorts and businesses along the north shore of Lake Kashagawigamog.

This presents a Catch 22 situation for resort owners. To take part in the project will allow future development on their properties. But hook-up costs seem out of reach for those suffering from the lag in tourism.

"You have to second-guess yourself," says Ward. "It will be We've pledged to assume costs, but can't say how much they've risen," says Ward.

The resort owners' 25 per cent share of the project's cost is a combination of frontage charges, connection charges and Equivalent Residential Unit (ERU) fees. They have the option of paying the money up front, or of amortizing them over a long period of time.

As well as contributing to the cost of constructing the line and upgrading Dysart's sewage treatment plant, resort owners face a substantial bill for connecting their facilities to the sewer line.

Wig-A-Mog and Deer Lodge will face higher costs than many other resorts because their cottages are spread out. Those resorts with cottages which are centrally located will have an easier hook-up.

Size of the resort isn't as great a factor when determining cost. "I'd say our costs will be twice as much as PineStone because their system goes toward the lagoon," adds Ward.

Conway denies interference allegations

by MARTHA PERKINS

Sean Conway denies he is exerting influence on the Ministry of Natural Resources to transfer timber rights from G.W. Martin Lumber to his relatives' sawmill.

"In no uncertain terms that rumour is untrue and unfounded," the Minister of Education said in a telephone interview with The Echo. "I have never interfered on behalf of my family."

The Renfrew North MP was responding to a letter sent to Lyn McLeod, Minister of Natural Resources, from David Anderson, division manager of G.W. Martin.

The Harcourt sawmill and planing mill will be sold to Robert Bury Ltd. as long as rights to lumber crown land are transferred. The closing date was April 10 but so far no transfer has been granted by the MNR.

"There are rumours Sean Conway is using his influence to have these timber rights transferred to Murray Brothers and McCrea Lumber in his riding," Anderson writes. "It is also well known Sean is a relative of the Murray family."

Anderson says not only does Murray Brothers not need the timber, but 400 jobs are on the line if Martin Lumber can't get the timber rights. The Harcourt mills have been closed since last September, laying off 125 employees and affecting the livelihood of "as high as 300" people involved in logging and transport.

Conway says he's "disappointed anyone would believe" he'd try to use his position to sway the government to favour his family. "I have absolutely no financial interest (in the company) and never had." Nor has he been asked by family to in-

MP won't back down after 25 years

Rumours that Bill Scott will retire this summer have been greatly exaggerated, says the long-standing Member of Parliament.

"There may be rumours but not from Bill Scott," he said in an informal interview Sunday afternoon at the Haliburton Legion.

The 25-year veteran became boisterous when asked to confirm or deny rumours he would be stepping down this summer.

"I can take them all on yet," he said with an energetic demeanour. "I keep healthy and don't wear out. I sleep very little. Give me five hours sleep and I'm good."

Considering the number of years he's held the position, has he at least considered not running again? "I will make that decision when the time comes to assess it."

Scott acknowledges there are many Progressive Conservatives in the Victoria/Haliburton riding who would be eager to take his place. "There's always people waiting and they'll be taken care of when the time comes."

Eakins will decide to run again only when an election is called

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Only when an election is called will MPP John Eakins decide if he will run again.

"My position is that unless I declare I'm not, I'm running again," the MPP said in a telephone interview Friday. "I just haven't come to that decision."

There are rumours that because of the Liberal government's high standing in the polls a provincial election will be called for September.

Eakins doesn't know if those rumours are true or not. "The only thing I know is what I read in the papers."

First elected to the legislature in 1975, Eakins says his main goal is to serve the people in his Victoria-Haliburton riding. "I don't use it as a political game. You have a job to do and you should serve until there's another election. One should have objectives and carry them out."

The six years Eakins was in cabinet—four as the Minister of Tourism and Recreation and two as Minister of Municipal Affairs—were obviously physically draining. Since being bumped off cabinet last fall—a move Eakins says was necessary to bring in new blood—he's been able to rest and re-gather his energies.

"Everyone gets tired," he says. "I gave my total time to the job. You put everything into it, seven days a week. I feel great right now and there are other objectives (as MPP) one might pursue."

Although his government is not popular in Haliburton because of the delays and possible cancellation of the 18-bed chronic care unit, Eakins says voters should not judge him on that one issue alone.

"It has to be more than a protest vote," he says. "If I'm a candidate I'd have no problem going to the people of Haliburton and talking to them about any issue. You don't throw someone out because of one issue... It's easy to stir up people's emotions on these things."

The committee studying long-term health care in the county (which Health Minister Elinor Caplan says must conclude the beds are necessary if funding is to be granted) must come up with a better alternative, Eakins says.

"The people, for the first time, during the public hearings (which are being planned) will have more input. I really feel you need more than the 18 beds. Are there better things we can do for people?... That money isn't lost."

As well, Eakins says he's glad the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Community and Social Services are finally working together. "This is the first time they've ever been brought together to talk about these problems."

Instead of focusing on the hospital issue, Eakins wants people to look at other positive events the province has helped to foster. "I've been able to do a lot for the people of Haliburton and I'm proud of it. You have to look at the good things that are happening."

ALWAYS READY TO SERVE: When Jean Lacey asked MP Bill Scott if he could attend the Minden Museum opening this summer, the long-serving politician said this type of outreach is just one of the reasons why he loves politics so much. The two were taking part in the Ladies Auxiliary Zone Convention at the Haliburton Legion.

Liberals reject pro-lifers

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Victoria/Haliburton Liberals for Life didn't succeed in getting its slate of delegates sent to the upcoming leadership convention.

Last Tuesday at the Academy Theatre in Lindsay, local members of the Liberal Party voted to choose the 12 delegates who will represent them at the Calgary convention in June.

Although the Pro-Life, or anti-abortion, supporters presented a slate of 12 delegates, not one of them was chosen.

To begin the selection process, the local association presented a list of 12 people chosen by a nomination committee, says association member Verne Graham of Minden. Each riding is allowed to send 12 delegates and the following were nominated: Women: Helen Haden, Sandra Jack, Marilyn Jennings and Ruth Martin; Youth Women: Michelle Jackman and Karri Rahn; Men: Lynn Craigmyle (Haliburton), Thomas Mangan, John O'Reilly and Ivan Rodd; Youth Men: Daniel Gardner and Norman O'Reilly.

Then 12 nominees who were presented as being pro-life were put forward: Women: Julie Gray (Haliburton), Dorothy Carroll, Carol Morton and Zita Devan; Youth Women: Jennifer Lasalle and Larissa Gray (Haliburton); Men: Donald Ward, William Morton, Frank O'Connor and Dr. James Lison; Youth Men: Matthew Garland and Michael Curtin.

There were therefore 24 nominees.

Each person making the nomination was allowed one minute to speak. The nomination was seconded and the person nominated could speak for two minutes.

Of the Pro-Life candidates, "not one said whom they were going to support," said Graham. The leadership contenders are Jean Chretien, Paul Martin Jr., Sheila Copps, Tom Wopple and John Nunziata. The latter two have said they are anti-abortion and Liberals for Life is supporting them on the first vote. Neither is expected to win, and Liberals for Life hasn't said who will be supported in the second and third ballots.

"We are looking for someone who will be the next leader and who can take that leadership in to win an election," Graham says of why Nunziata and Wopple aren't favourites with the general membership.

As well, "the Liberal for Life nominees were not able to say how many years they had been involved (with the Liberal Party)," says Graham. "They lacked credibility."

The association delegates pledged mixed allegiance. Five are in favour of Chretien, one is in favour of Copps and two of the women and all four youth nominees didn't say who they support. Many of these nominees have been working for the Liberal party for many years, Graham says.

More than 500 people were in attendance. However, only 380 had voting rights. They chose the association slate of delegates.

"It was the most polite meeting where there was a possibly contentious issue," Graham says. "Everyone spoke well and was received well."

He was concerned though that Liberals for Life seemed to have a copy of the local association's members. Each leadership candidate is given a copy of the riding's membership. Either Wopple or Nunziata must have forwarded this to Liberals for Life, Graham says, because there was a local phone campaign before April 17's election of delegates.

Scott doesn't dream of retiring

He has stayed in politics for so long, he says, because he enjoys the contact with people. "I never was tied (to the House of Commons). I didn't have to stay there. I attend a lot of functions like this (Ladies Auxiliary Zone convention) and I enjoy them. I get a lot of phone calls."

He's the type of person who must keep busy, he says.

On other federal matters, Scott says he's "very concerned about Meech Lake and the divisiveness of the country. I don't want to see Canada break up."

When asked what he would say to his constituents about how to resolve the constitutional impasse, Scott says "I don't know how much Meech Lake means to the average Canadian. (Quebec) wants recognition of being a distinct society in an English speaking country. I don't think it should be an issue. We all live in a great country."

Scott says he sits with a French MP who speaks very good English and they get along well.

As for municipalities declaring themselves English-only, Scott says "where numbers warrant they should look at that (bilingualism)." He recognizes the cost factor, he adds.

"I hope things cool out. We have to have a little understanding on both sides."

On Canadians' unhappiness with the Goods and Services Tax (GST), Scott says "Give me an alternative. We have to do something."

The GST is replacing the Manufacturer's Sales Tax, which Scott says makes it impossible for "manufacturers to compete in world markets." Instead of this hidden tax, the GST will be obvious.

Could the government cut back on spending instead? "We have cut back by 12,000 jobs in civil service and that's still ongoing."

What does he think about Alberta MPs David Kilgour and Alex Kin- dy being kicked out of the Conservative caucus because they voted against the GST? "That was their choice," Scott says, referring to it as a "performance."

Would he be tempted to do the same thing because many of his constituents are against the new tax? "I haven't polled all my constituents. I know there's feeling out there."

Correction

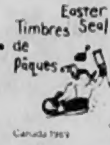

When Rita Sparling approached Dysart et al council this month requesting a licence for her Mobile Catering Service, she said she had approval to use Harry Pye's kitchen at Minden's Rockcliffe Hotel to prepare hot and cold foods.

However, Pye says he has no knowledge of this, as reported in last week's paper.

Also, a request to council by HAVE (Help A Village Effort) was to use Glebe Park, not Head Lake Park, to hold a music festival.

The Echo regrets any inconvenience this may have caused.

Sewer line approval still requires a pollution plan

by LEN PIZZEY
Publisher

Lake Kashagawigamog area cottagers have lost their bid to delay Haliburton's sewage plant expansion project. Cottagers wanted a full environmental assessment of the project, but environment minister Jim Bradley has rejected that request, and ruled the project can proceed to tender.

At the same time, however, Bradley acknowledged pollution is a serious problem in the lake chain, and called on the municipality to draft a pollution control plan, as well as to demonstrate that the lake chain can handle additional effluent from the expanded plant, conditions that could inflate project costs and further delay the start of construction.

In a letter responding to property owners' concerns, Bradley gave four reasons for proceeding to tender without a more detailed environmental assessment.

Firstly, he said, the expanded plant will produce a phosphorous concentration of not more than .2 mg/l, which the environment ministry deems acceptable. "This concentration will ensure that the amount of phosphorous discharged directly from the plant will not increase," Bradley said.

Secondly, the municipality will be required to monitor water quality in North Kashagawigamog Lake for phosphorous and other nutrient loadings, in consultation with the MOE. At present, it is not clear how this will be done, or who will bear the costs.

Thirdly, the plant expansion will be approved in incremental phases "until additional assimilative capacity of the receiving lakes is proven by further studies carried out by (Dysart)", Bradley said. The cost of these studies is not known. Nor is it clear what would happen if a study says the lakes cannot handle effluent from an expanded plant.

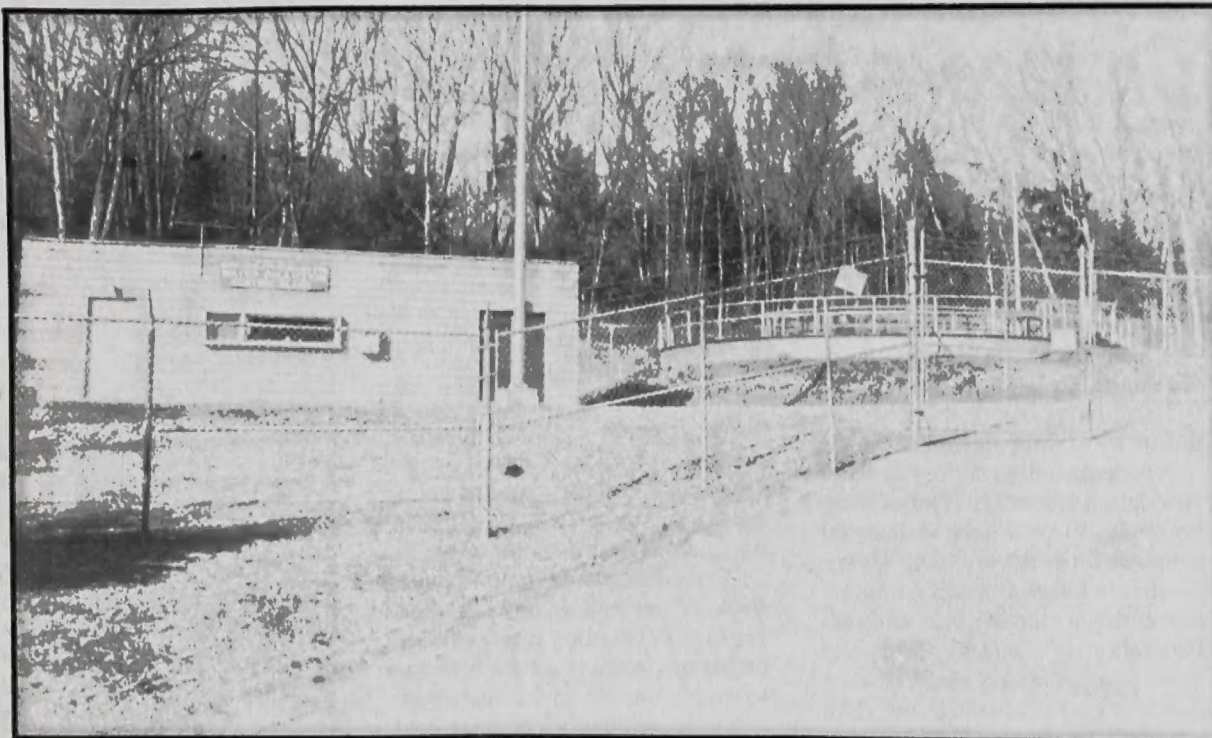

Fourthly "the MOE will require, as a further condition of approval, the production of a Pollution Control Plan (PCP) for that portion of the Drag River system within the mandate of Dysart et al, by April 1, 1992."

Bradley said water quality in the Lake basin has deteriorated "largely as a result of impacts from non-specific sources," and to reverse the trend "the banning of phosphate-based products or the restriction of further development in the charge area may have to be considered."

The Pollution Control Plan Dysart must now draft with the help of the MOE and consultants will outline the nature, causes and extent of water pollution problems in the Drag River chain; propose remedial measures; and recommend an implementation programme. The plan will have to look ahead at least 20 years.

Although Bradley set a deadline of April 1, 1992 for completion of the PCP, Dysart et al reeve Bill Davis believes council can move swiftly to begin drafting the plan. In the meantime, the sewer line extension and plant expansion could go to tender this fall. Construction could start late next winter, and will take about a year to complete.

BIGGER AND BETTER: Dysart's sewage treatment plant in Haliburton will be expanded in the near future if a number of environmental conditions, detailed in the accompanying story, can be met. The plant presently handles sewage from Haliburton Village, but it is at capacity and must expand to facilitate development.

Dysart reeve is enthusiastic and unavailable for comment. But Environment Representative Mike Irwin offered the following statement: "The Lake Kashagawigamog Association will have to respect the decision of the Ministry of the Environment with hope this decision will not adversely affect our community in the long run."

Davis says he's assured the project is the right step in helping to preserve the environment of Lake Kashagawigamog.

"I feel really good from an environmental stand-point. We do have a problem in the area."

Down the line, Dysart faces possible additions to the school and hospital which will put more pressure on the treatment system, he says.

"It (the project) will certainly relieve an environmental problem I believe we have on the Kashagawigamog chain."

"The environment is something that can't be played with. The damage is irreversible."

A five year wait

The project to construct a sewage forced main and expand the Haliburton Water Pollution Control Plant was first approved by the Ministry of the Environment in 1985.

Last July, Dysart council learned the ministry would not provide funding in 1989. "It was only turned down because (municipal) decisions had not been made to be in the position to use the money," says MPP John Eakins.

Still, the ministry continued to fund pre-engineering work on the project at 81 per cent. This work included the cost of an environmental impact study of the sewage plant expansion completed by consultants Totten Sims Hubicki in December 1988.

The project was reviewed when the study was made public during a meeting last August.

With strong environmental concerns, the property owners associations of the Lake Kashagawigamog chain requested the project be "bumped up" to an Individual Environmental Assessment.

Dysart et al was given a month to address concerns by the project's objectors.

Because of these delays, engineering costs initially set at $55,000 more than doubled.

Resorts wary of line costs

John Teljeur Jr. of Deer Lodge says he's already faced with a $100,000 hike in cost since last year's estimate of $250,000 of hooking up the resort.

"It's really long overdue," he says of approval. "But it's going to take some time to evaluate what the costs will be for resort owners."

"We think it's a great idea, but we have to take a look at the costs. We'd like to do it, but have to see if we can afford it first."

Teljeur obviously shares Ward's reservations about the project, which has been delayed by a number of setbacks ever since it was first approved in 1985.

"We've been disappointed before, so we're wary—it's like, 'What's next?'" says Teljeur.

Last July, the Ministry of Environment announced construction of the line would not be funded that year. And then property owners along Lake Kashagawigamog requested that the expansion be "bumped up" to an Individual Environmental Assessment to address their concerns of further deterioration of water quality.

Over time, costs have risen. And the resort owners don't see this approval as an end to their wait.

"It's a long way until I see the first shovel full of dirt hit the ground," says Teljeur. "Everyone's joyful, but I'm not ready to celebrate now. It's too premature."

He jokes that his family figures they should start digging for the line right away before someone changes their mind about the expansion.

As for concerns the expansion will lake, not to kill it."

Teljeur thinks there will always be objections to the project. "But we feel this is the best route to go. The resorts will grow, but we have to take precautions and steps to not harm the environment and we feel this is the best way to do it."

Ward says more "orderly control of the environment" will be possi-further harm the lake, Teljeur says the Lake Kashagawigamog Property Owners' Association doesn't realize that water quality may be improved by the project.

"It's not like tile-beds work 100 per cent," he says. "At least this way what's going into the lake is being treated."

Resort owners are also concerned about preserving lake water quality, he says. "We've got more to lose than a cottager or resident. If the lake is polluted, we lose a $1.5-million business. We don't want to be out of business. The project was proposed to protect our ble when resorts are hooked up to the treatment plant. "Nothing is more important than our lake," he says.

The sewer line extension is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for many resort owners. And Ward hopes funding approval is a sign "that the provincial government is finally taking the project seriously, and not just trying to snow us."

"We believe, despite their policies, there's a future for tourism in this province, and particularly in this area."

"But this approval has come at the worst time."

Work is approved for Kawagama Lake Rd.

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Restructuring of 800 metres of Kawagama Lake Road has been approved despite area home-owners' concerns that traffic will increase.

County council voted for improvements to the Sherborne road during a special meeting last Wednesday. According to a justification report provided by County Engineer Bill Obee, the road will be restructured between Hwy. 35 and the intersection of County Roads 8 and 12, providing "an increased life expectancy and an improved product to an escalating traffic volume."

"As it stands now, it's a pretty deplorable mess," said Sherborne et al Reeve Don Shortreed.

Council was told the road is structurally inadequate, with numerous frost heaves, pavement cracks and distress signs, and generally a very uneven rough pavement surface.

A lack of proper ditching to handle spring run-off causes inadequate drainage. And the surface is narrow in isolated sections, constricting both directions of traffic movement.

The county intends to construct a roadway that will: service projected traffic volumes and carry a life expectancy exceeding 10 years; virtually remain unchanged horizontally or vertically; eliminate the need for property acquisition and limit the need to make traumatic changes to existing roadside elements (i.e. retaining walls, unique trees and shrubs) within the existing right-of-way; and provide proper drainage and run-off control, reducing the degree of maintenance required.

Residents are concerned the road will be moved closer to their homes, and worry more drivers will use the road once it is improved.

"That's not the idea," assured Shortreed. "It's to make it a safer road for the traffic that's already there."

Cottagers form council to act on TSW concerns

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A voice has been given to those within the Trent watershed who are frustrated over inequitable distribution of water throughout the system.

Presidents and executives of reservoir lake associations from Peterborough, Victoria and Haliburton counties formed the Trent-Severn Reservoir Lakes Council on Saturday during a meeting held after the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Association's spring seminar.

With a goal of bringing "the TSW into the 21st century," the council is made up of members from the Gull River, Burnt River and Southern watershed regions.

The council is comprised of 11 members—three from each of the three watershed regions. Presidency will rotate throughout the regions, and the president and executive director of FOCA will sit as ex-officio members. From each of the three regions, an executive consisting of president, vice-president and secretary were chosen.

The meeting was opened by FOCA Executive Director Jerry Strickland, and led by Bill Brown, president of the Halls/Hawk Lakes Property Owners Association.

"We must generate, and inspire political will," Strickland told the group, giving a status report on past negotiations between federal Minister of Environment Lucien Bouchard of Parks Canada, former provincial Minister of Natural Resources Vince Kerrio and members of Haliburton Highlands Water Management Advisory Committee (HHWMAC).

Strickland expressed frustration over a lack of progress resulting from these meetings, with the federal government which administers the TSW not acknowledging a problem and the provincial government refusing to get involved.

"We have to get on with life and we're not prepared to sit back and listen to anymore 'I'm all right, Jack' (from the federal government) and 'It's not our mandate' (from the province)," said Strickland, a long-time HHWMAC member.

"We need a clear focus to establish a more equitable system for our reservoir lakes," agreed Brown. "Unless we act together and get involved in a pro-active way in planning, we'll be left in the dark."

General goals of the new council include: developing policies which reflect the common interests of all cottagers associations; lobbying local, provincial and federal governments to achieve a common goal; and maintaining a close liaison with FOCA.

With hopes to actively make changes, the council's goals include:

- encouraging the TSW to be more responsive to the needs of cottagers and communities alike through the reservoir system;

- establishing mechanisms to ensure a more equitable distribution of the available water between the watershed and the waterway itself;
- encouraging a review for possible expansion of the reservoir capacity of the system;

- seeking immediate representation on the HHWMAC; and
- seeking support for specific and general objectives from township and county governments bordering the TSW.

Brown said the TSW has a mandate only to maintain requisite levels for waterways to the south. "They'll take anything they'll need from us to get that level."

Hopes for a possible solution to the problem are hampered by Parks Canada, he said. "They have enough water for their mandate. And the province isn't interested in getting involved. To them, it's a headache."

"There will be no change unless we work together with municipal and county governments."

Presently, concerns have been ad-

Sherborne appoints new deputy-reeve, councillor

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A Sherborne et al councillor has been appointed the northern municipality's deputy-reeve.

Hans Liebman has replaced Ed Vallance in the council's second highest position. Vallance had to vacate his position when he moved out of the municipality.

The Municipal Act says that when a deputy's seat becomes empty, council can either hold an election or appoint someone who is already on council.

Because Liebman's councillor seat was therefore empty, council appointed Ted Keown as councillor.

"He's very community minded and showed the interest," Reeve Don Shortreed says of the new councillor. Keown lives in the Oxtongue area, where Vallance used to live, and has been a volunteer fireman since the department's inception.

Shortreed says he was glad Keown came forward because in the 1988 municipal elections, all positions were acclaimed except the deputy's. Keown was sworn in April 24.

Three fires start off a dry season

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Dysart firefighters can tell you it's dry. Very dry. On Monday night alone, they learned that lesson three times.

In early evening, the Haliburton department was called out to a grass fire which got out of control on Highway 118, across from the Northwood Inn. On their way back to the station, the sirens were turned on again as they rushed to another grass fire on Highway 121, across from the Grass Lake narrows. The danger was extinguished there for a couple of hours before they received a call to another brush fire on Highway 118, near Camp Towhee.

All three fires were quickly controlled, but such fires can easily go the other way.

"This is the worst time of year because of all the dry grass and leaves," says Tom Russell, fire operations manager at the Ministry of Natural Resources' fire station in Haliburton. "We're expecting a bad spring."

Although the ground is moist, the surface is extremely dry. It can rain one day, Russell says, and if the next is sunny, the grass will quickly be like kindling again. Compounding the problem is traditional low humidity and spring winds.

"It doesn't take much of a wind and the fire can move faster than we can run," Russell says.

To prevent such fires, the MNR has implemented new strategies this year. For the first time, no burning at all is allowed during the day, unless it's someone's business to clear lots or municipal burning. "We don't want to restrict people from making a living... (but) we're trying to cut down on the number of times volunteer firemen have to go out, away from their jobs."

As well, the MNR will be strictly policing fires to ensure all burning is done with a permit. Charges will be laid if the landowner has not got a permit from the MNR.

People who do have fires and who don't take enough precautions will be fined for costs if the firemen have to be called out. The costs will be transferred to the municipality.

"We'll have a real enforcement blitz in the next week or so," Russell warns.

In the meantime, he suggests people no longer burn their grass. This practice is as old as the village, Russell says, because it clears away the dead grass, gets rid of leaves, and makes for a green lawn.

"We'd like to see people rake their leaves and let the grass come up naturally," he says.

Lutterworth flood plain plan is set

Lutterworth Council is finally prepared to set a date for a public meeting determining flood plains in the township.

At Thursday night's meeting, Councillor Lisa Mercer expressed frustration over the number of revised and re-revised erroneous mappings the township has received from its consultants since the project began last May.

"At one point I thought I had a handle on the flood plain, but now I'm not so sure," she said of the ordeal.

Those affected by the flood plain mapping will be notified of the meeting, which should be held sometime in late June.

County will urge MNR to transfer timber rights

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

With the sale of G.W. Martin Lumber hanging in the balance, the Minister of Natural Resources will be urged to transfer timber licences to the Harcourt mill's potential buyer.

Minister Lyn McLeod has been asked to meet with officials from Haliburton and Hastings Counties to discuss problems with the transfer, which is holding up sale of Martin Lumber to Robert Bury and Company.

Bury offered to buy the Harcourt sawmill and planing mill, putting about 125 laid-off employees back to work. All other conditions have been satisfied; the deal will go through only if the ministry agrees to transfer Martin's timber licences and timber volume agreements to Bury. These agreements allow Martin to log on crown land.

But the closing date of April 10 has come and gone with no answer from the ministry.

"This is a serious problem for this county," Warden Don Shortreed said when the matter was dealt with during a meeting of Haliburton County Council last Wednesday. "The sooner the better that we work on this."

G.W. Martin was the largest employer in the county. Members voted unanimously to call upon the minister to meet with county delegates.

According to the Ministry of Natural Resources, a detailed "business case" supplied by the Harcourt mill is now under review, providing justification to prove their need for a share of crown timber.

Regional Forester Terry Dodds of the ministry's Huntsville office told The Echo G.W. Martin was running at 25 to 30 per cent on crown wood, "so we can't be a major criteria" for the stall.

He says it's against ministry policy to automatically transfer limits when businesses are sold. The ministry is reviewing lumbering practices in this region, and is in favour of having crown trees harvested.

County council discussed the matter after hearing a letter sent to the minister by G.W. Martin Division Manager David Anderson.

Anderson says closure of the mill last June has not only put 125 people out of work, but has indirectly affected 300 people in the logging and transportation sector.

Unemployment insurance for the laid-off workers runs out in June.

"If these people are not called back to work by June, Martin Lumber will be responsible for the severance pay to all employees, which is in the million dollar range," says Anderson.

Bern Berry, chairman of the county's social services committee, told council there was a 9.37 per cent increase in these services this March. If the deal doesn't go through, "it's possible it will make things worse."

Anderson says the Robert Bury company plans to "spend considerable dollars" to upgrade the plant. "Future plans include secondary plants to finish the product produced here, which will certainly make more jobs for the people in this area," he adds.

"The fate of all these employees, local business and all the people in this area hang in the decision made by the Ministry of Natural Resources," Anderson ends his letter, pleading with McLeod to use her influence to transfer all licences "as soon as possible so we can get these people back to work and stop a lot of bad feeling that is growing very fast. We are counting on you."

Monmouth Reeve Keith Tallman commented on rumours that the ministry would supply licences for only half the amount of crown timber. If that is true, "I guess the deal won't be going through," he said.

In his letter, Anderson also notes rumours that MPP Sean Conway is using his influence to have the timber rights transferred to Murray Brothers and McCrea Lumber in his Renfrew North riding. For more on this, and Conway's response, please see accompanying story in this week's Echo.

Caplan needs new heart: Stanhope

The following are matters discussed in brief at the April 11 meeting of Stanhope council:

Oakview docking

Neighbours of the Oakview Lodge on Little Hawk Lake will not renew a docking agreement which provides slips for lake-access cottagers.

"Unfortunately, we feel that this is too dangerous for our children in that the boats are coming in and out in front where they swim and it detracts terribly from our view of the lake," writes Sandra Wells.

Council had approved of the docks as long as abutting neighbours agreed. Oakview owners, Sharon and Roger Hewson, have a yearly lease for permission to float the docks. The Wells have agreed in the past.

Since the Wells property is for sale, it was expressed that this may be a way of pressuring the Hewsons to buy the property. They say that is not feasible.

"It's a sad situation because the need is there for the docks," said councillor Eleanor Harrison.

The docks will have to be removed.

New heart for Caplan

Elinor Caplan needs a change of heart—literally.

Acting on Councillor's Murray Daniels suggestion, council feels that actions of the provincial health minister demonstrate she would benefit from a heart transplant. Perhaps then she could properly address health needs.

"I've lost complete faith in that woman," said Reeve Harry Davis, responding to a circulated motion asking Caplan to spend more money to provide proper health care.

Conway denies rumours

terfere, he says.

The real problem is an over-capacity of mills in Eastern Ontario, the Renfrew-area native says. Free trade has adversely affected sales to the United States and there are too many mills for the amount of trees which can be harvested from crown and private lands, he says.

In Renfrew, foresters have tried to tackle this problem by setting up a foresters' group which works closely with county council and the economic development agency.

Victoria-Haliburton MPP John Eakins says he is also disappointed such rumours have been circulating publicly.

"It's unfairly casting aspersions on an individual without any truth (to back it up)," Eakins said in a telephone interview Friday. "I'm somewhat disturbed by the letter. It's so easy to spread gossip and innuendo but I don't like that."

When he was a minister—of Tourism and Recreation and Municipal Affairs—Eakins says people often accused him of favouring one individual or company over another. These accusations were unfounded, he says.

For more details on Martin Lumber negotiations, please see Susan Grober's story elsewhere in this paper.

The Ontario Environment Ministry's announcement that it would fund its previously agreed share of a sewer line to commercial properties on the north side of Lake Kashagwigamog, as well as pay 81 percent of the cost of expanding the Haliburton sewage treatment plant, was news the community has been waiting to hear for more than five years. The sewer line would help a number of resorts deal with sewage disposal problems, open the door to resort expansion, and help stem the deterioration of water quality that concerns so many Lake Kashagwigamog area property owners. Expansion of the sewage treatment plant also would facilitate further commercial and residential development in Haliburton village, easing fears that growth would be stymied by inadequate sewage treatment facilities.

The news was good, but it does not mean construction of the line and expansion of the sewage plant is assured. There are a number of hurdles yet to be cleared, any one of which could quash the project.

The biggest hurdle is the money that resort owners must contribute to both projects. Costs have tripled since the project was first proposed. Tourism is slumping, and the viability of many area resorts is threatened. Resort owners know the sewer line is an opportunity that will not come their way again, but if they cannot afford to finance their share, the line will not be built.

Other, less apparent but no less daunting hurdles are being thrown up by the environment ministry, which may be trying a little too hard to support the project on the one hand, and respond to cottagers' concerns on the other. In fact, minister Jim Bradley has carefully built a number of 'escape clauses' into project approval, any one of which could bring it to a full stop.

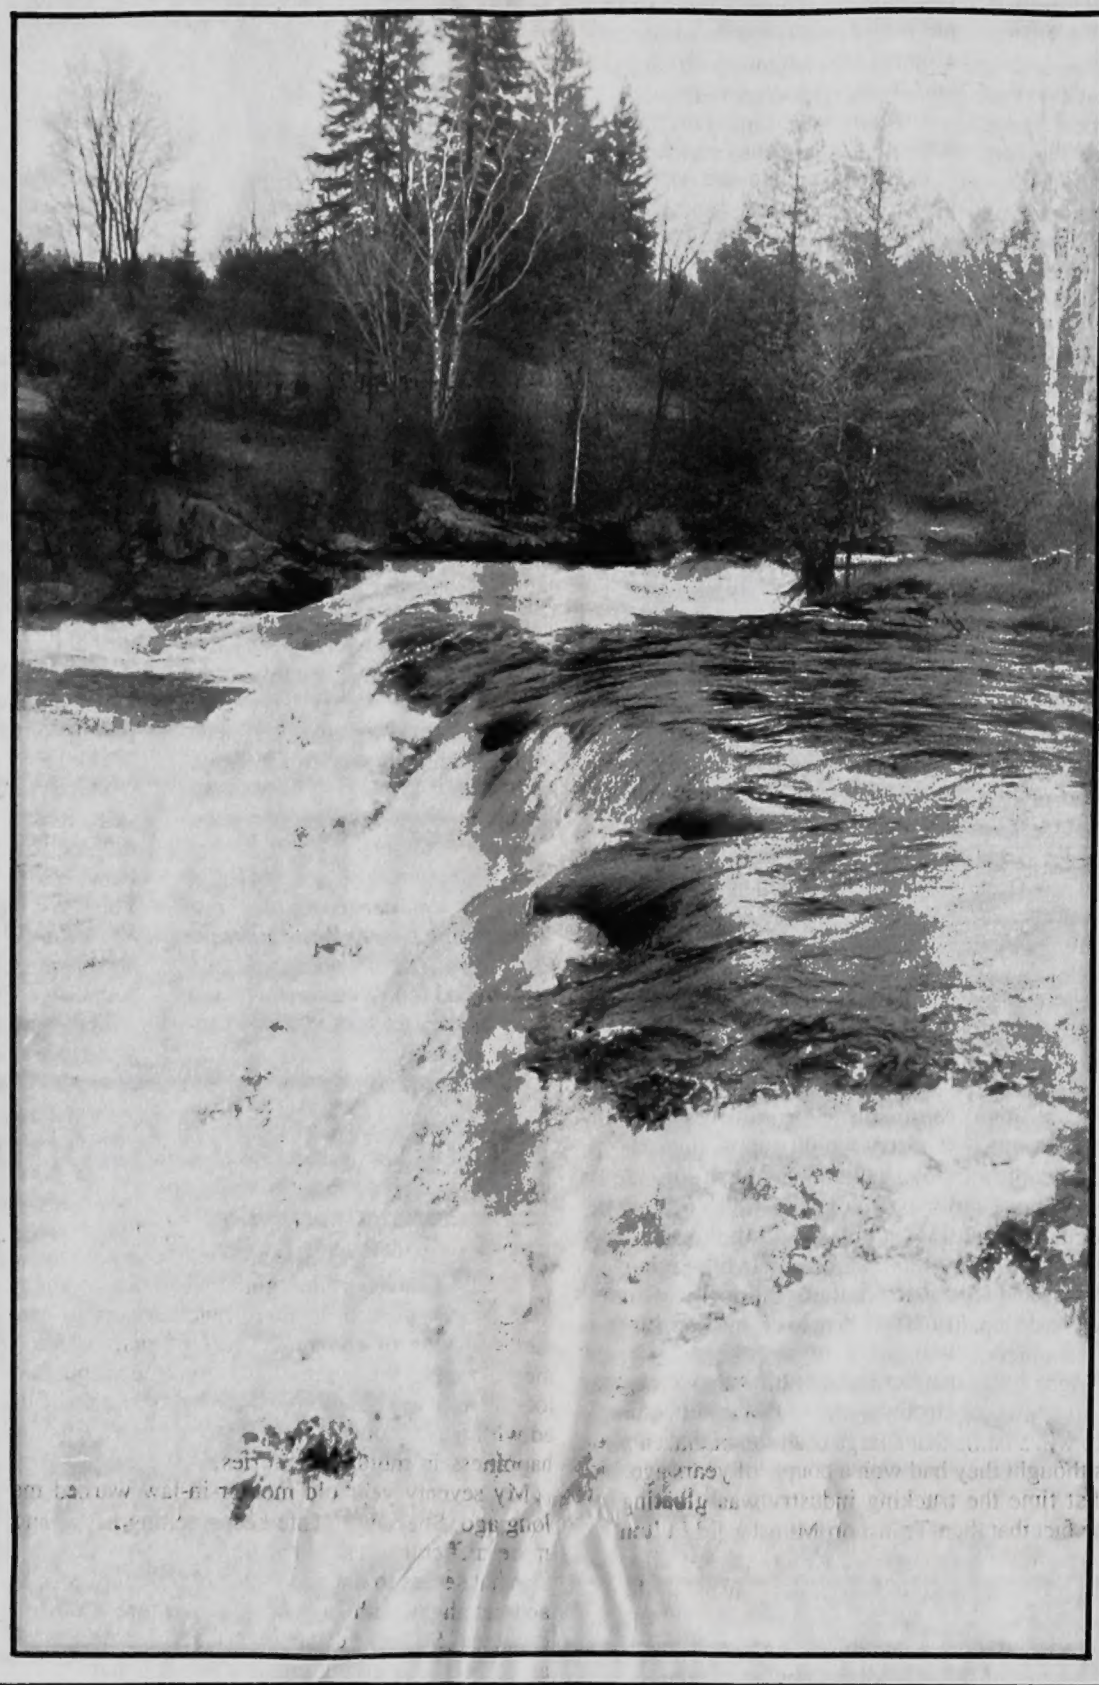

Bradley denied cottagers' request for a full environmental assessment of the project but he did not say it could proceed. Instead, he imposed conditions on the municipality which could prove prohibitively expensive or impossible to meet.

Dysart will be bound, as a condition of project approval, to monitor the water quality of North Kashagwigamog Lake for phosphorous and other nutrients, even though the sewage plant would be upgraded to meet current phosphorous emission standards, and even though the heaviest influx of nutrients into the lake may come from inadequate septic systems elsewhere on the Drag River watershed. No provision has been made to fund these tests, which presumably would be ongoing. And it is not clear what the implications would be if the readings were high.

Most significantly, the minister has said the municipality must demonstrate that the lake chain can handle the effluent without further damage. Obtaining such proof might take months or years, and again, no funding has been provided to do so. Bradley gives no hint of what would happen if council decided to take the sewage line and plant expansion to tender, proceeded with construction and then discovered that the lake chain could not handle any more effluent from the plant. Would the plant and line be shut down, or its operation scaled back? How can council act responsibly in the face of these huge uncertainties?

As a further condition of approval, Dysart must develop a Pollution Control Plan for the entire Drag River system within its boundaries, taking a 20 year perspective. The study must "outline the nature, causes and extent of water pollution problems, propose remedial measures and recommend and implementation programme." The scale of this requirement is daunting, and it could be very costly to meet the minister's conditions.

Taken together, all these requirements suggest that construction of the sewer line is far from assured. They also suggest that the environment minister may be trying to pass the buck. Either the expanded plant will meet provincial standards or it will not. Surely it is better to treat sewage in a carefully monitored environment than to let it seep into the lake from overworked septic tanks and inadequate tile beds. Expanding the sewage plant and building the line will alleviate, not exacerbate, pollution problems in Kashagwigamog and the minister should say so, instead of playing games with people's hopes and fears.

Architect fee raises questions

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

Regarding the unbuilt chronic care addition for the Haliburton Hospital, your edition of April 18 stated that the architect's fees are $326,000.

The standard architect fee is 6 percent of a construction cost and this is very often negotiable to a lower percentage.

Assuming they charged the standard percent, this represents a construction project of $5,430,000!!

Even if air conditioning was later added to the plan, the fee appears to be way out of line.

I do not recall reading where anyone has questioned this fee. If not, I think it is time that those in authority did, and in doing so, give the public an explanation.

John R. Dill,
Eagle Lake

To the Editor:

After the massacre of American General George Custer and his troops at the battle of Little Big Horn, the great Sioux Chief Sitting Bull led his 5,000 victorious warriors north into Canada. Sitting Bull's fierce host was met at what is now southwestern Saskatchewan by North West Mounted Police Superintendent James Walsh and a half dozen mounties, who were there to ensure the peace was kept.

Today, at Fort Walsh, in Cypress Hills Provincial Park, there is a large bronze statue depicting the meeting of Superintendent Walsh and Sitting Bull. The mounted figure of Walsh is wearing a pillbox hat (you know, the kind that bellboys in hotels wore in the black and white movies of the 1940s) that was part of the official uniform of the mounties at that time. Walsh was not wearing the peaked stetson that is now a component of the RCMP dress uniform (and the casual wear of state troopers, forest ranger and Smoky the Bear in the United States).

Walsh would have become a legend if he had worn a felt fedora, a sailor's cap or not hat at all. His fame rested on action, a sense of duty, poise and character, not on his uniform or headgear.

Perhaps the true meaning of those values was better understood in the past.

Today, if one is to judge from some recent letters to this newspaper, the clothing a man wears has become more important than the quality of the man (or the woman) who wears it. After all, an unsightly turban may ruin the visual symmetry of that anachronistic Musical Ride and, heavens, what would those American tourists say!

It is incredibly sad to think that there are living and breathing Canadians who link their national heritage to the spectacle of a mounted lance charge that became functionally obsolete at the turn of the century. It is indescribably sad to be a citizen of a country in which there are still people who believe a dress uniform frozen in time is more important than the human qualities of the person charged with performing the duties that a uniform—any uniform—represents.

Perhaps some of the so-called patriots among us have forgotten that Sikhs, wearing turbans, fought and died by the thousands during the Second World War. As far as I know, their courage, fighting spirit and sense of duty were not impaired by the fact that their religion compelled them to eschew metal helmets as headgear. Gurkha troops—by Royal dispensation fought, died and slit enemy throats as far into the modern era as the Falkland Islands war while wearing headgear not usually accepted as normal combat dress for British troops.

How "un-Canadian" of these people to think that strength of character is more important than some backwoods notion of pageantry. How "un-Canadian" of them to hope that strength of religious belief is more important than some preposterously romantic linkage between an obsolete dress uniform and "national heritage".

There is something ingrown and prematurely calcified about people in this country who refuse to bend with the practicalities of the times. They hide in clubs and talk only to each other while seeking reassurance that the world around them is unchanging. They are spiritually fossilized and will, no doubt, be the subject of anthropological studies in the future.

They are to be pitied because they are frightened.

WHEN YOU STOP and think about it, you will find that it's incredible how much building activity there is here in Haliburton County and how many new businesses have opened up or are thinking of starting up in the Haliburton, Minden and surrounding areas. Here we are coming into the busy summer season and we find that employers are crying for help with signs in their windows and advertisements in the local papers. Some people tell me that you can get good help if you are willing to pay for it. Some business places are still paying minimum wage, but it's practically impossible in this day and age to live on minimum wage and it's going to get worse. We always welcome businesses into the community and hope that the business venture turns out to be a success. We think in some cases that when a person opens a new business that very little thought is put on the question "what is the business potential of this particular area". If you have the idea of coming into this area and hoping to make a living out of two months business you had better have another thought coming. In other words, you had better think twice. The successful businesses are those that operate on a year round basis and they will still be in business when the others are long gone.

My hope in human nature was restored on Sunday, which by the way was Earth Day, when I was walking up Highland Street I noticed several people cleaning up the debris on the river bank near the bridge. I had a short conversation with two of these people and they told me that they are cleaning up the environment, but the problem is to keep it that way. We must stop people from throwing their litter here, there and everywhere if we are going to still have life on this planet. There's still a great deal to be done and we hope that the local council will step in and see to it that the clean-up job is completed.

Wally Chambers who resides on Paradise Lake phoned me the other day to inform me that the ice went out of Paradise Lake on Monday, April 23. Wally keeps track of when the ice goes out each year and he tells me that it went out on April 7th in 1987 and on April 10 in 1988.

Friends and relatives of Clifford Watt met at the home of his daughter Carolyn at Haliburton on Saturday evening to help celebrate his 80th birthday. All his brothers and sisters were present with the exception of Donelda Pritchard and Vonnice Carberry. Present were his brothers Len and Floyd from Fenelon Falls, Phurness of Haliburton and his two sister Lila Austin and Vera Dean also of Haliburton. Happy birthday and may you have many more.

I think there are times when the 4C's is not given the credit it deserves. This organization works very hard behind the scenes making sure that the less fortunate people of the community and surrounding area get enough to eat and that they receive the clothes that they need. We understand that food supplies are badly needed at the 4C's and if you can help out please leave your canned or dry goods or other perishable articles at most of the local churches or drop them off at the 4C's office in the Drag River Building on Maple Avenue in Haliburton.

Times have really changed and prices aren't the same today as they were a few years back. This is true in the newspaper business as in other businesses in the community. One day last week Jean Iles of Haliburton dropped off a couple of interesting receipts. The one was a renewal for the Haliburton County Echo made out by my mother on October 8, 1970. The one year subscription at that time was $3.00. Jean had another receipt for a renewal subscription dated October 18, 1976 when the price was at $6.00 per year. It's a little higher today.

According to John Powers in his Outdoors column in last Wednesday's Star the forest tent caterpillars are coming next month and will peak in early June.

Two long-time members of the Haliburton Curling Club were honoured at the annual Curling Club Banquet held at the Royal Canadian Legion in Haliburton last Friday evening. Raymond Scott and his wife Bernice were presented with a special plaque in recognition of over 30 years of support to the Haliburton Curling Club. Congratulations and may they enjoy many more years of curling at the local club.

If you enjoy a good fashion show you won't want to miss Fashion Fiesta '90 which will be presented by The Village Shoppe and Country Pickin's at the Pinestone Inn and Country Club in the Grand Ballroom this coming Friday evening April 27. Special attraction: Faye's Bridal Salon. Doors open at 7:30 p.m. and show time is at 8:00 p.m. This year's proceeds will go to the Victoria-Haliburton Summer Camp Fund. Tickets are $6.50 and are available at Country Pickin's, The Village Shoppe, Hair Emporium and in Minden at Highlands Jewellers.

POINTS OF VIEW

Limiting the load of information

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

MARTHA PERKINS

INFORMATION OVERLOAD is dangerous, especially when you're in the information business.

Compelled to read as much as I can, and frustrated because I'm barely scratching the surface, I periodically find myself rejecting any more bits of knowledge.

Try to memorize the name of every European leader and yet know what changes are being made to the provincial Municipal Act at the same time.

Don't expect to understand everything about the latest social ill and keep track of what's happening with garbage disposal.

With all the trouble spots in the world, how can you focus your mind on global environmental changes?

There is simply too much accessible information. We can't pretend to be able to absorb it all, yet with the constant barrage of words, we feel we ought to. Sometimes I seek refuge in a novel—with plot, characterization, theme—but then I realize how many books I've yet to read. Taking a walk on a beautiful spring day should fit in somewhere, too.

Last week, some Grade 4 students told me they thought The Echo was boring, especially since we don't have colour comics. On information-overload days I tend to agree with them, but I still feel it's important for people to be aware of what's happening in their local world.

Which is why there's nothing more frustrating for community newspapers than some of the following examples: Reporter Susan Grober was at the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Association meeting on the weekend. Some cottagers were complaining that they aren't told about development, municipal by-laws and the debate on the Trent Severn Waterway. An official with the Ontario Municipal Board advised that everyone buy a subscription to their cottage's local newspaper. Hear, hear (and not for monetary reasons). We're often tempted to stand up and say "In last week's Echo there was a story which dealt with this and..."

Or there are the people who bring a proposal to council without first checking what the municipal by-laws will allow. Then they get angry when council says permission can't be granted.

So the information which makes our lives much easier is there, if only people always knew how to access it.

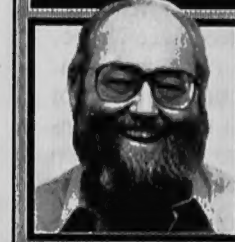

The trick is to be more picky about what you read. If I can't read all of the Globe and Mail, I at least try to read the editorial pages. I'll buy or borrow feature magazines, such as Atlantic, or Saturday Night. I find it easier to read features which explain things in detail than to fill my mind with unrelated tiny details about a myriad of events.

On the radio, I try to limit my CBC news-program listening, and turn to stereo, or put in a tape. Certain music is always guaranteed to soothe the information-riddled soul. Sometimes silence reigns. Or I delay going to the library for a week. There are things you can do to restore your sense of peace in this world.

Beleaguered though we be, we must not settle for ignorance. Just choose your information wisely.

ACCORDING TO THE LATEST POLLS, our Liberal masters in Ontario are riding so high that Mr. Red Tie may even be considering calling an election soon. Amazing.

My past experience in research tells me that the opinion poll sample in Haliburton County — if any — would be very small. With our luck, they would have called a committed Liberal — one of those people who feels Elinor Caplan did the right thing by reneging on the Haliburton Hospital deal.

Actually, the provincial government seems to have found some mysterious way to do what they want to do and still come out ahead, while the federal folks can't seem to get people to think they are doing a darn thing right.

While people rant and rave about the GST and Meech from coast to coast, in Ontario we carve logging roads through sacred bushland, line up heart patients for a year or more before their life-saving operations, and let the pop bottlers off the hook on requiring even a paltry 30 per cent to be sold in return-able containers.

And right now, the persistent behind-the-scenes forces of the trucking industry look like they are about to win a battle that a large coalition of citizen's groups thought they had won a couple of years ago.

At that time the trucking industry was gloating over the fact that then-Transport Minister Ed Fulton was buying their campaign for 82 foot truck-trains, with larger units and triple trailers also on the agenda.

I learned a bit more about this when I wrote a column in August of '87, describing how I had witnessed a tailgating trucker force an Ohio family in their

Lazy day in a gliding canoe

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

WE GOT THE OLD CANOE OUT of moth balls Sunday afternoon, and not a moment too soon. It seemed the two of us had been working non-stop for the last couple of weeks at our so-called 'hobby-farm'. We were long past due for some rejuvenation.

The old hens were in the freezer, waiting for their turn at the soup pot. The barn was re-fortified against the 'critters', whitewashed and readied. The fresh young poulets came Saturday, stretching their legs and wings out of their long trip in cramped shipping crates. They clucked and pecked their way around the coop and pen, took long drinks at the water tray, and even laid a couple of eggs.

Saturday afternoon, I heard the old troy-bilt kick in and warm up so Ed could check the oil and belts and other vital parts. He took it to the west garden bed where the soil is sandy and the frost just out of the ground. In a little while he came in, "Look out the window, Gin. I tilled a corner for you to plant your peas tomorrow".

So Sunday morning, even though the promised sun was late breaking through, I took my tools and manure, may sawdust, straw and seeds and made my small Earthday bed.

The soil felt cold but soothing as I dug my bare hands in the deeply loosened mass. I took my time, being out of shape, and also wanting to enjoy my task. Soon I had a small raised bed of fine soil with lots of buried nutrients. The old bed frame was put in place with peas on either side, flanked by radishes south and lettuce north.

Ed wanted to plant a tree in memory of our neighbour. He found a tiny fir on the roadside, dug the hole, mulched and watered it, working the water into the loosened earth. He spread the little tree's long roots and pushed the soil down firmly around it.

Finally, it was time to play. "Let's take a snack and eat in the canoe."

Ed filled our small juice bags while I spread cheese on crackers. We loaded the lunch bucket and headed for the dock.

That first push-off from the dock in spring is rather like a freedom flight. You can't help but take that deep breath, close your eyes and feel the motion of the air as you move through it. It cleans your cluttered mind and washes all the cares down through your toes and out some imaginary drain in the boat's bottom.

There's a sandbar underneath the marsh on the left side of the river mouth. It hides a second entrance to the river with reeds and last year's cat tails. We almost always glide this way.

"Ssh! Let's see if we can sneak up on anything."

Once we get up river, past the sight of road and homes, we often feel, the first time out, as if we're in some other river than our own. The river banks look strange without their greens and flowers. The beavers have been busy chewing tag alders to make huts. The water's very low, too low. The bank eroded and a couple of old cedars hang precariously across, causing us to dip our heads, slightly fearful that the roots might lose their grip just as we pass beneath them.

"Gin, look left!" he alerts me in a whisper as we hear the rustling.

I strained my eyes, and scanned the bank until I finally caught the eyes of the masked bandit blending into brush and browned grasses.

"Stay on this side of the lake this year, fellow."

Conversation was sparse, as we each enjoyed the sounds of wind through pines, rippling run-off waters, singing birds.

"Ed, there's the heron," as it awkwardly gangled skyward, then became a smoothly gliding, blue-grey aviator soaring out of sight.

"The water's awfully low. There's hardly any current."

"I know. Look how the wind even blows upstream."

The river has an easy hundred snaky bends and turns, and hidden round them ducks fly up or muskrats dive. The red-winged blackbirds and tree swallows make a pass to check us out.

We moored ourselves amongst some aged dead-wood showing near the bank to eat our lunch with sun and breeze around us. Then we floated downstream, in and out of stumps and twigs, picking up some floating styrofoam, a baseball. Missing the discarded beer can. Unable to get at the lawn chair.

It was such a lovely day.

This photo takes us back to the year 1899 when Jack Maxwell of Gooderham was the Warden of Haliburton County and Reeve of the Township of Growing old has its wrinkles

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

GROWING OLD has some wrinkles in it. I always thought that those twilight years a couple share together were quiet, mellow, kind of romantic years of rich common memories and joy in grandchildren. It turns out that lots of folks find the long road wearisome and filled with frustrations with each other as well as some happiness in mutual memories.

My seventy year old mother-in-law warned me long ago. She said, "Life keeps getting better and more difficult at the same time."

What seems to happen is that older couples fight and get angry with each other a lot more than they expected. So they get sad and sometimes depressed and lonely. Forgiving one another gets harder and harder. Small things sometimes irritate more when two people are alone a lot. Sometimes people eat at different times because the spouse chews too loudly or is constantly snorting and sniffing—whatever. As the hearing and sight deteriorate, frustrations with each other increase.

It's kind of sad that after years of side by side toil, older couples get on each other's nerves, love's sapped away and folks begin snipping at each other in cruel and even mean ways. No one wants it to be this way, but it sometimes happens that your number one friend and life-long companion becomes an irritant, like a festering boil that won't go away.

The children of these cranky parents are troubled and helpless to do anything. Sometimes the kids don't even know about it.

It seems to me that I probably shouldn't try to talk about this matter because I really do not understand old age yet, but since no one else is telling it like it is, I'll fill in the silence until someone does.

One scenario that I've seen is this one: the husband, dad, is getting weaker. His health is not like it used to be. He is not sexually active, at least physically, but his spirit and mind are willing. Sometimes dad gets sick of being helped, taken care of and looked after. He used to take care of himself and his wife. Now, he isn't quite as proud of himself as he used to be. People treat him like half a man, like he might fall, or shouldn't be on the roof, or can't hear or see well. He gets sick of people protecting him, coddling him like a silly kid.

At the same time, he doesn't feel strong, well or attractive. He feels weak and can't be bothered.

The wife, mom, isn't well or strong either and worries about herself and about dad, but everytime she tries to help or caution him, he snaps at her. They both have their own ideas about what to do with these remaining years but mom worries that dad doesn't really do much whereas she has lots of friends, phone calls and things to do. She wants him to go with her. He doesn't want to be alone or for her to drive by herself, but he doesn't want to be doing what she is doing. She doesn't want to watch Wheel of Fortune and hockey all the time and he doesn't want to be going all the time.

So they have a lot of tension between them. This tension gets angry, anger brings up those old hurts and fears of the past, old angers get you down and you get depressed, dragging each other down.

When you are out in public, everything is put aside and both pretend that all is well, but when the two are alone, the snarky, short, cutting comments are all that break the sad silence. Love and gratitude for each other seem a memory of long ago.

What should older couples do? It seems like years go by and these cold wars continue, making the time folks have left together miserable and discouraging. A sad ending to a sometimes very happy marriage and life.

Folks caught in this scenario who have never talked honestly to each other have the most difficult time with it, because the only way out of the cycle of mutual hurt is to talk openly and honestly about how each is feeling at this stage in the marriage and life.

A good tool to start with would be to start what you are going to say with, "I am feeling...", not "You make me feel such and such" or "You are constantly doing such and such". Try saying "I am feeling like everybody is treating me like a cripple." or "I am feeling so sad about this".

A good rule in married life too is for the other to try to repeat what they have heard before offering a rebuttal. "I hear you saying that you feel belittled" or "I hear" whatever. Then at least one gets to express their real feelings and knows that they have been heard correctly, not misunderstood or simply tolerated.

Frankly, these are lousy tools, I know, but a beginning place. I wish some older couples would write and tell me how they solved this problem in their later marriage so that we can all know what to do when our time comes to face it.

Above all there must be a way to understand and forgive each other at this time in life as much as there was in the beginning. Remember how you used to forgive and confess and laugh in tenderness? That is possible again. Otherwise you're just waiting for death to solve the problems.

A vehicle of pleasure and pain

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

IT WAS ONE OF THOSE unpredictable spring mornings when either rain or snow might pour forth from the skies, depending on the whim of Mother Nature. She was speeding along Highway 35, late as usual for an appointment when the car rounded a curve and she hit the brakes, but not too hard. There on the side of the highway a deer stood silhouetted against the bush and overcast morning sky. It was trapped on the wrong side of the road, away from the tree-lined route of escape. A short distance from where it stood, the land dropped sharply down to Boshkung Lake. To cross or not to cross, that was obviously the deer's question.

As she sat in her car, not quite at a full stop in case another vehicle should come barreling around the curve after her, one ear picked up the car radio and its description of the rush hour traffic in Toronto. The deer delicately picked its way along the shoulder, still uncertain as to what direction to take. Then it stopped again and looked straight at her. She wanted to stay put and just watch it for awhile, but common sense and an awaiting appointment told her she had better put her foot to the gas pedal. This was neither the time nor the place for nature watching. As she reluctantly pulled away from the deer, she saw another car approaching from the opposite direction. Checking the rear view mirror, she saw that the deer still had not made its move, so she flashed her headlights in warning to the other motorist that there was something up ahead and to slow down. "They probably think it's a radar trap," she thought. "They're in for a much more pleasant surprise."

She mentally chuckled to herself. If she had a car phone and if it carried all the way to Toronto, what a hoot it would be to call the radio station, as some

Time for 'spieling is over

But curlers manage to sweep up awards first

Some of Haliburton's most avid curlers got a chance to look back on the season with fond memories on Saturday as the Haliburton Curling Club gathered at the Legion for a year-end banquet and awards night.

First to receive their awards were the ladies. Two rinks finished in a tie at the end of the regular schedule, and shared the Beall Trophy. Winners were Phyllis Bishop, Joan Brown, Arlene Scheffee and Edith Hoxie, and the rink of Joan Cameron, Terry Hartwick and Bernice Scott.

Winners of the playoffs in the ladies division, and recipients of the Aileen Curry Trophy, were the rink of Phyllis Woodcock, Betty Curry, Janet Bradley and Ursula Beachli.

In men's league play, schedule winners and recipients of the Hughes Trophy, were the three man rink of Dave Gray, Ron Berry and Ken Rapson. The top rink in the playoff round and winners of the Gilliam Trophy were Dale Robinson, Mark Robinson, Jon Lansdowne and Jason Lansdowne.

In mixed league play, the Beachli Trophy went to the Tuesday 7 p.m. schedule winners Bob Nichol, Mike Iles, Doris Winter and Wendy Iles. Tuesday 9 p.m. schedule winners, and recipients of the Varty Trophy, were Emily LaRue, Murry Burton, Don Popple and Ed Morais.

The Elstone Trophy was presented to Wednesday schedule winners Paul Marlin, Linda Marlin, Ken Barry and Sue Fugar.

These seasons offer many family and individual participation opportunities.

Lots of new exciting events are being planned for this year. The Township has appointed a relatively new Recreation Committee for 1990 and along with these new members have come lots of new ideas and plans for community activities and events in the next few months. The Committee—Thelda McGuire, chairperson; Frances Bogart, secretary; Fred Gardner and Eleanor Harrison, council representatives; Anna Barry; Valerie Bryant; Becky Durkin; Brigitta Aschenbrenner; Ross Vincent; Elizabeth Bruinenberg; Cheryl McGuckin; George Tipton; and Daniel O'Donnell—have decided to try and utilize the wonderful parks and the large Stanhope Firefighter's Hall (North Shore Road and Highway 35 just north of Carnarvon) by setting up new clubs and holding more dances and family activities.

The Thursday evening BINGO games held every second week at the Stanhope Firefighter's Hall at 7:30 p.m. are still a great success and happily attended by a great many of our local people. (As of June 1, games will be held weekly for the summer.)

THE SODA CLUB is a new club for youth ages 11 through teenhood meeting on the first Friday of every month, commencing on May 4th, 8:00 p.m. at the Stanhope Firefighter's Hall.

LINE DANCING is swinging to a great beat by our ladies on Thursday mornings at 9:30 a.m. in the Stanhope Firefighter's Hall.

A SPRING DANCE is currently being planned for April 21 at 8:00 p.m. in the Stanhope Firefighter's Hall. This is sure to brighten up your spirits and lighten your steps as spring is just around the corner.

Local councillors: Show some leadership

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

LOCAL POLITICIANS must learn to show leadership if we are to combat the environmental problems facing the county, renowned naturalist R.D. Lawrence said during Saturday's "disappointing" turnout at his Earth Day forum.

"If this is an example (of interest in Earth Day) tonight, then nothing much will happen tomorrow," Lawrence told his small but committed audience. "Although I believe in global conservation, global conservation begins at home."

"What concerns me locally is very little is being done by local councils."

Lawrence's forum, organized as part of an ongoing environmental series at the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve, is an opportunity for councils, interest groups and citizens to share ideas and suggestions. Yet ideas can't be shared if politicians don't attend the information evenings.

"The very fact that Earth Day was coming up and there has not been a statement from councils is indicative of what we're talking about... Don't they read?"

Because of the way municipalities raise money, Lawrence says there's "a tendency to turn Haliburton County into a large resort with cottages on every lake." Yet the more development there is, the more environmental problems there will be, citing the Haliburton sewer extension proposal as one. "If you pump effluent into a river system, it's going to affect the environment."

"We need a social awakening and to prod our municipal councils to look at the problems we can do something about here."

"Why wait for councils?" Forest owner Peter Schleifenbaum asked.

"We don't have enough people to produce the money to do anything," says Eric Lilius of CHANGE (County of Haliburton Advocates for a

'Although I believe in global conservation, that begins at home,' naturalist and author R.D. Lawrence said at Saturday's Earth Day forum. 'What concerns me is very little is being done by local councils... Don't they read?'

Naturally Good Environment). CHANGE organized the recycling program in Haliburton and then abdicated responsibility when the municipality took it over. "It's being done but there's no engagement in a public education process. Management doesn't seem to be happening."

"It needs to be taken back into the public realm," says Lawrence, who's tired of the politicians who repeat the "green" mantra—the environment is Number 1—without corresponding action.

"When the municipality got into recycling, it became overwhelming so fast you turn your back on it," Lilius says.

Garbage is something that affects us all, especially excess packaging. When people have to throw away paper and plastic to get to the product, landfill sites fill at an amazing, and expensive rate.

In other provinces, forests have been clear cut and the slash burned. "It looks like devastation, a war zone. We're baking the ground, the soil runs down the hill, and it's changing salmon migration patterns."

"Agricultural chemicals are creating negative soils. Soil becomes dead and you've got to keep using fertilizer to grow anything. In British Columbia, they had to kill cattle because the meat was contaminated by chemicals. We're looking at so many factors."

Local farmer Godfrey Tyler questioned

Lawrence's definition of fertilizer. Because he doesn't have cows rotating with crops on his land (thereby producing a natural fertilizer), Tyler uses commercial nutrients. "The major proportion (of fertilizer) are mined minerals. Potash and phosphorus are mined minerals."

The environment has run for a thousand years without the help of man-made fertilizers, Lawrence says, and proper management should follow the same basic principles nature provides.

It's like antibiotics, Tyler says. The right amount will help you, the wrong amount will hurt you.

"How do you know companies are using the right amounts," Lawrence asked. "You trust them," Tyler replied, to which Lawrence said, "I like that word integrity but it's getting in short supply... We have to measure long-term risk and long-term health."

Farmers are taking too much of the abuse, though, Tyler argues. Haliburton doesn't have good soil, but friends who farm on better land "are running into the same economic difficulties. Each have the same pressures, and some are in hock for a lot more than others."

Tyler's heard the saying that 85 per cent of Ontario's agricultural land can be seen from the top of the CN Tower in Toronto, and "85 per cent of it is under asphalt," Lawrence agreed. "We're losing farmland across the country at an amazing rate." Only seven per cent of Canada is conducive to agriculture in the first place. "We will become dependent on other countries. We are the second largest country in the world and the impression is we can take in all kinds of people. But most land is unsuitable."

Not everyone can go back to the land, Tyler said. Nor should they, Lawrence replied. In former cultures, every minute was spent on finding and gathering food and that's not possible any more. "We can't turn back the clock. Much of the damages is not reversible."

However, present attitudes can spell disaster for the environment. "Life has got to be easy all the time, no one should suffer," Lawrence said of today's philosophy. "It's been a radical change" and one which doesn't bode well for the future.

The debate then turned to what's being done in the school. The biology illiteracy rate is very high, Lawrence said, because it is not introduced until Grade 10. And then teachers get students to cut up dead frogs, which turns many girls off the subject.

"Things are changing," said Lilius, who's impressed by what's happening in local schools.

"A good teacher only teaches what he's familiar with," says Tyler, who believes more information must be made available to teachers as well as students.

"It's happenstance," Lawrence says of what's taught.

The evening came to a close with Lawrence questioning how everyone can work together to improve our lot.

"The whole question of survival should be addressed on a grassroots level," he says. "It seems sensible to address things now without getting into a fight."

The next environmental forum at the Forest is during Forest Week. On Saturday May 12, people with varying outlooks will gather to discuss forestry practices.

Water levels make reader angry

MORE LETTERS FROM ECHO READERS...

To the Editor:

This letter is in reference to the picture in your newspaper of November 1, 1989 (of low water levels on Essonville Lake).

It is time that we cottagers and year-long residents ask for a better deal concerning the water that is taken from our lakes.

I have been given to understand that it is only a few years until the agreement with the Trent System is up for renewal. All the cottage associations and year-long residents should demand a better deal for the future. We are the ones who pay taxes to the municipalities around these lakes.

I would suggest that:

1. We limit the amount of water that they can take;
2. The gates on the locks be fixed or replaced. Many gates leak tons of water in a season the gates near Bolsover at Fairhavens are very bad in this regard;
3. The locks be full of boats before the gates are open;
4. A charge should be made according to the size of the boat (not motor);
5. We get our local politicians to give us a helping hand.

Sincerely,
Jane Carson

To the Editor:

I am writing with a two fold purpose. Firstly, I had the pleasure of working in the arena with a great group of people from the Haliburton Figure Skating Club on the Easter weekend. The Club had been asked to prepare and sell meals during the Coby Islander Tournament. Cheryl and Greg Cooper deserve a pat on the back for all the hours of work they put in before and during the tournament.

Secondly, I would like to express my concern with the condition we found ourselves working in upstairs in the arena. The overloaded circuits were one thing, but the cleanliness of the entire upstairs area was another. I would not have invited anyone upstairs for a meal.

Maybe with the onset of spring, the arena will be in line for a thorough spring cleaning.

Roxanne Casey,
Haliburton, Ontario.

Veterans recalled

To the Editor:

Perhaps through the broad circulation of The Echo, I might be able to contact person(s) with an interest in Harrogate and Ripon cemeteries in Yorkshire; or perhaps, in ceremonies to be carried out in connection with the Eastmoor Memorial and the placing of the crest of the 432 Squadron in St. Clement Danes, London.

I shall be going on May 23 and would be more than pleased to take a photo of any part and especially of any marker at a gravesite. My brother is buried in Ripon; it is his Squadron which will be honoured. He was also Flying Instructor E.F.T.S. Mt. Hope.

There are nearly 800 Squadron crests embedded in the floor of St. Clement Danes. A little history: "Legend has it that when King Alfred (871-901) expelled the Danes from the city of London, he permitted those with English wives to settle just outside the City walls. This settlement was associated with the building of the church and known ever since as Saint Clement Danes".

Please do not hesitate to contact me; I think it is so important to remember.

Sincerely,

Marion Morris/Kennedy,
Box 100, Haliburton K0M 1S0

Volunteers honoured

To the Editor:

Volunteer Week began on April 23 and is being celebrated across North America. In Ontario, it is our chance to recognize the thousands of people who contribute time and energy to a variety of causes throughout the year.

The Ministry of Tourism and Recreation relies on volunteers to help deliver sport, fitness and recreation programs across the province. Volunteers organize social events, they coach our children, they help our elderly and they raise funds for programs and projects that improve the quality of our lives.

In a recent study, my Ministry found that almost 400,000 people in Ontario devote over 45 million hours annually to their volunteer work in the recreation sector, work that is worth the equivalent of over half a billion dollars.

However, we can't put a price tag on the dedication and commitment of people who expect no other reward than our recognition. Let's show the volunteers in our communities just how much they are appreciated. They deserve our support.

Ken Black,
Ontario Minister of Tourism and Recreation

Thanks from Japan

To the Editor:

This is first by way of thanks for the beautiful word and picture account of our recent visit to Haliburton (March 14th edition of The Echo). There are times when my emotions flow over and I must say you moved me in that direction again with your account of our "night in town". Thank you.

If I may, I'd also like to say thanks to the Rotary Club and the churches for the wonderful reception we were given. Most particularly of course, we thank the generous people of Haliburton who opened their homes to us. For me, it was going back to family and old friends. For my students, it was the introduction of a completely new and very rich dimension which I am quite certain will remain with them throughout their lives.

Haliburton put the cap on a truly great cross-cultural experience for all of us.

Thank you all very much.

Too much garbage

To the Editor:

Some years ago we women of Eagle Lake became concerned about the amount of garbage going into the ravines in our county. We became involved in making changes.

We started composting household waste and organic materials. We campaigned for the recycling of paper, glass and tins. We gave out information on toxic waste and safer household cleaners. We realized that our dumps were filling up with plastic, so we made fabric bags and refused plastic

County may start plan for emergencies

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Haliburton County Council will look into establishing a County Emergency Committee.

During a meeting on Wednesday, councillors decided to forward the idea to the county planning committee for discussion. An emergency plan would benefit the county if there were a wide-spread disaster, such as a toxic spill or airplane crash.

Cardiff Reeve Maurice Bradley had recently attended a Mutual Aid meeting, and said local fire departments are "very interested" in the idea. "There is no co-ordination in this county," he said.

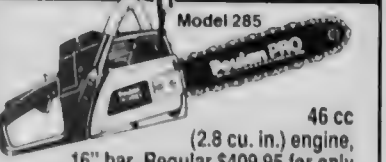

Already, several municipalities have their own emergency plans.

Glamorgan Reeve Bob McCausland said such a county-wide committee was first proposed several years ago. But nothing ever came out of the idea.

Deep Bay Road work gets nod

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Property owners have lost the fight against improvements to a two-kilometre stretch of Deep Bay Road.

About 10 people spoke out in objection to the restructuring project during a special meeting of Haliburton County Council last Wednesday. The property owners would prefer to see the road re-routed behind their homes and cottages, but council's vote was unanimous to fix the existing road from Little Gull to just north east of Devil's Lake Road.

The project will cost $840,000. "I've had concerns, but I'm convinced this is the only way," said roads committee chairman Bob McCausland before the recorded vote.

A bypass proposed in 1973 would re-route the road to the west, but council felt this is too costly. At $1.75-million, creation of the bypass would cost about $900,000 more than restructuring the present road.

Then the existing road would be needed to access the cottages, leaving maintenance responsibility to either the county or Lutterworth Township.

A justification report for the project also states the proposed bypass has a total of three deficient vertical curves using the principles of a 60 km/hour design speed.

"The roller coaster type vertical alignment of the bypass route would provide minimal sight distance a less than safe situation than the proposed route along the existing road-way," reads the report.

"The proposed improvements would provide a safer road surface, as well as two lanes for two-way traffic movement as compared to the existing single lane. Guide rail protection shall be installed along the hill as a measure of increased safety to the motoring public."

But these assurances couldn't sway the cottagers who insisted that road improvements will promote speeding in front of their properties.

"I think there should be consideration for people's property values," said Mike Bornemann. "I don't think it's fair the county can make that decision. It's not their land."

Bornemann's cottage is just outside the affected area, and he said the proposed removal of trees, docks and boathouses will cause a decrease in property values which could outweigh the extra cost of creating a bypass.

"You can not go ahead and destroy people's property because of a $900,000 difference."

Warden Don Shortreed said council couldn't address the question of property values without proof they will decrease.

Solicitor Russell Black agreed, adding it is possible property values could actually increase once the cottages are accessible by a safer road.

Black also said a bypass could be considered if two-thirds of the property owners representing half the assessment offered to pay the additional $900,000. But Bornemann rejected this idea.

Ken Hack was also angered by the proposal. "We're going to have our entire reason for having a cottage completely and utterly destroyed."

He said the work is unnecessary. "Two cars can pass at any spot on that road, only not at 50 miles an hour. This is a county road, not a super-highway, which is what you people are trying to build."

Rather than make the road safer, upgrading will only invite more people to use the road, and at a higher rate of speed at that, Hack said. "It's dangerous for young people to cross the road now. Can you imagine what it will be like with two lanes and a guard rail?"

Hack also noted a 1973 letter from then-County Engineer Jack Cox, stating that the bypass proposal had been accepted. The project was never pursued because no funds were available.

"How I wish it were 1973 again," said Hack, adding that if the bypass route were taken, the existing road should be maintained by Lutterworth Township.

Lutterworth Reeve Carol Puffer objected. "It's the consensus of council that it wouldn't make sense to have the road maintained in front by Lutterworth and in back by the county."

In response to a proposal by Bornemann that the property owners could assume the existing road, the solicitor said that would only be possible if all owners agreed to maintain a private road.

Another bone of contention is that Stan Kubels' cottage must be removed because it stands in the way of the area to be restructured.

Kubels asked council to "take a sober look at the human side of the matter." The road will be widened to three times its present width, he said. "Do it only two times and away from us, and then our cottage can be saved."

He also argued against an $8,000 assessment of the cottage. "The proposed level of compensation is totally inadequate."

And the proposed use of rock fill will devastate the present shoreline, said Kubels. "People will not be able to enjoy the beaches. Look at the Little Gull area of the road. It's ugly, and ours will be worse."

Shortreed told Kubels the county has wrestled with the problem of his cottage, but couldn't come up with any other solution. "It's very unfortunate," he said. "This is the fairest thing because of the title of where your cottage sits."

The cottage straddles the road and shore allowances, across the road from Kubels' property.

Where road improvements will affect people's property or structures, fair market value will be offered as compensation, Shortreed assured.

Structures such as docks and boathouses which are salvageable will be moved back after construction of the road is completed.

Joyce Hack said once the lake is filled the water will be too deep to replace some docks. "Our children will be forced to go down to the beach or swim in deep water."

Derik Gillis said the road will be 30 feet from his front door, and will force his children to cross a highway and climb a guard rail to reach Gull Lake. "I'm going to lose everything if the road goes through."

Reeve Puffer said the road is considered a priority road. "There have been school buses going off the road. So we're faced with making a decision on it now."

Shortreed dismissed accusations that the road will become a death trap. "I'm surprised no one's been killed already with the condition of the road."

He also suggested that police be encouraged to supervise the area and set up a radar trap for those who go over the 60 kph speed limit. "It's up to every individual in the county to help with law enforcement."

Pageantry and pomp were not out of order when the Legion's Pipe Band led participants in the Ladies Auxiliary Zone Convention parade along the main street on Sunday.

Ladies of the Legion show their true colours in parade

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

In giving his address to the dozens of women parading during Royal Canadian Legion Ladies Auxiliary zone convention on Sunday, Padre John Phillips reminded people that some wars were not yet won.

"Legion people especially have a sense of how we've abused one another through the years," Branch 129's spiritual leader said at the service by the cenotaph. In some places today, there is still "the pain of injury and death" as wars pit one country, or one culture, against another.

Battles are to be fought here as well, he said, linking his message to the Earth Day celebrations. We all face "the challenges of centuries of abuse and we are not immune" from the damage we have inflicted on our planet.

"But ecology is only one symptom of a darkened world," he said. Young people today are also facing the damages wrecked by drugs and family breakdowns.

"Today as we gather, my prayer is that we make this world anew a special place, a place of purity, so our children may go on to know the glory of a free and vibrant world."

The dozens of women and local officials were gathered for the Ladies Auxiliary zone convention, which is sponsored by Haliburton once every 13 years. Festivities and speeches resumed at the Legion hall after the main street parade.

Hydro plans two more stations to meet demand

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Increased demand means two more hydro transmission substations will be built in Haliburton County next year, local politicians were told Thursday night.

Ontario Hydro plans to build a sub-station near Kennis Lake and one on the Gull River west of Minden, Minden area manager John Lane said at a Hydro-sponsored gathering at the PineStone.

There were 550 new local subscribers last year and 511 in this year's first quarter, which indicates increased capacity may quickly be used up.

As well, Lane hopes the improvements will help solve the "fair number of problems" north of Haliburton.

Approximately 15 county officials were given a complimentary meal before Lane outlined Ontario Hydro's overall plans for the future. This includes the building of more hydro-electric and nuclear generating plants.

"If we're going to do any building, we're going to have to have the support of the majority of people in the province. We think we've looked at all the alternatives," Lane said of why such meetings are being held. "It's the people who elected you who will have the ultimate say."

Ontario Hydro's main argument is that if it is going to keep pace with demand, more energy must be produced. Choosing how to produce this energy is a bit like deciding which alternative does the least economic impact.

Environmentally-friendly options aren't always feasible, Lane said. "If we use solar systems and it's a cloudy day, we still have to supply the power." And wind generators tend to make a lot of noise.

"There are problems on both sides," he said.

There's a possibility a meeting on power reduction can be held with local Business Improvement Area members as well.

Home owners are being offered rebates on shower heads which use less hot water and other incentive programs—ground source heat pumps for one—will soon be im-

"It's a balance. There's a good and a bad to everything," Lane said of the options available to Hydro.

Council has voice on water levels dressed within the Haliburton Highlands Water Management Advisory Committee, established in 1977 and featuring representatives from the county, the Trent-Severn Waterway and FOCA.

Still, "there is no deliberate attempt to ensure that all lakes are represented," said Brown.

The HHWMAC won't dissolve upon formation of this new council, Brown explained. He also dismissed a suggestion of bolstering HHWMAC, rather than starting a whole new group.

"It's only an advisory committee... Let's not pretend anything is going to happen through that committee unless it's restructured to get some constitutional authority."

Through the lakes council, the cottagers hope for action.

One proposal already brought to county council by Brown in February is to have a seven-foot floor on the drop on water levels on the Hawk lakes through Thanksgiving weekend for a period of five years.

Boating issue

Water levels will not be the only concern dealt with by the council. Shoreline and area development is one hot topic which cottagers wish to address.

The council is also set to deal with the daunting task of helping establish bylaws to regulate boating. "Why not do that kind of thing together to get what we want for the reservoir lakes?" said Brown. "We have to think county-wide at least, and probably multi-county wide."

"It's a political process, and in my judgement we have to work together."

The following people have been chosen to represent the three watershed regions on the council:

Gull River system: Morris Wilson, Horseshoe Lake; Cheryl Cathcart, Redstone Lake; and Bill Brown, Halls/Hawk Lakes.

Burnt River system: Al Ferguson, Drag Lake; Ernest Thorn, Lake Kashagawigamog; and Rob Prure, Contau Lake.

Southern system: Dr. Gordon Judge, Catchacoma Lake; Ed Phillips, Anstruther Lake; and Marion Duncan, Eel's Lake.

damage to the environment.

"It is a balance. There's a good and a bad to everything," Lane says. Some argue nuclear power is too dangerous and its radioactive waste can't be properly stored. Using more coal-generated plants adds to acid rain and the greenhouse affect. Damming rivers destroys ecosystems.

"We're making the best use of what we've got," said Lane. "These are decisions which will affect the future of the province and the legacy we leave our grandchildren."

"The thing that would solve our problem is an economic downturn but I don't think you'd want that."

Nine evaluation criteria are used to judge the merits of the different approaches: Customer satisfaction, reliability, safety, environmental impact, costs, social acceptance, technical soundness, flexibility and

In conjunction with construction, Hydro wants to encourage more people and businesses to practice conservation techniques.

Power users are as follows: residential and agricultural, 29 per cent; commercial 34 per cent; and industrial, 37 per cent. Hydro hopes initiatives will reduce consumption by 25 per cent and give it more time to consider its options. But by 1997, it says something has to be done or there will be power shortages.

Industry and business are being targeted first since they are the primary users. Metering has been changed so companies can get a cheaper rate during off-hours, new equipment is being suggested and some are taking financial advantage of agreements which allow Hydro to reduce power when there are shortages.

County warden Don Shortreed asked why Hydro isn't developing more hydraulic sources of power, such as the proposed generating station on the Irondale River. The private company would not consider the venture if it wasn't profitable, Shortreed said.

"We recognize our own limitations," Lane replied. "It's really too small. We build big things; we're not good at building small things... It's a heck of a lot more efficient for this small entrepreneur."

Dysart Councillor John Parish asked why "Hydro seems to hit every big tree" when deciding what trees need to be cut for new lines. "Is there a theory to it?"

Lane assured him there wasn't and suggested that if people have complaints about right-of-ways, they should contact the Minden office.

PEOPLE

Teenagers find Hi-Y provides opportunity to explore feelings

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

ASK MANY TEENAGERS what's on their minds and you'll probably hear a lot about fashion, music and who was seen walking down the hall with whom. They're thinking about many other things as well, but they don't want to talk about that. Especially to adults.

If a teenager told you they were thinking about what God has to say about this whirlwind of emotions and impressions they're caught up in, you'd be taken aback. Their friends would snicker. God just doesn't rank up there with U-2 and Tom Cruise in a teenager's popularity contest.

Hi-Y is one of the Christian youth groups in the county trying to change that image. It's not that they try to make God more hip. Instead they give teenagers an excuse to talk about Him.

"What I want to occur is that it's not 'weird' to love God, and it's not weird to want to pray and it's not weird to live by Christian values and that there is someone they can count on who will listen to them," says group leader Sandy Stevens.

"There's a lot of things you want to talk about but you don't want to tell your parents because they'll yell at you," laughs Gerald Morrison, who at 18, is one of the oldest members. Parents worry because they love and care for you but they're still your parents. "Sandy is closer to our age and understands things and she's not going to hit me."

Now Sarah Levis and Shawn Winsley might take a whack at each other now and again. Although not brother and sister, they certainly know how to act as though they were. Put a 12 year old and a 14 year old in the same group and there's bound to be A LOT of teasing.

"There's nothing else in our church for someone who's 12 years old," says Sarah. She's with the group because "it's fun," but many of her peers might not understand why. "I tell them I'm going to euchar." Why euchar? "Because everyone else plays euchar on Tuesday night."

Sarah finds learning about God through stories, songs and discussions is easier than sitting through church services which are geared for an adult audience. "Sometimes I just don't understand how it all fits in."

"For many of the teenagers, just going to church isn't enough," adds Gerald. "It was never that meaningful to me. When you're talking about God with people who are the same age and your friends, it becomes more meaningful."

"Sometimes you talk about things or pass the time. But when you're talking about things that really matter, you can help each other and it gives you a closer bond with people."

Mrs. Stevens recognizes that need and feels Hi-Y provides the outlet for an exploration of Christian values and how they can fit into a teenager's life.

"They need some kind of unit to work inside of," she says. "A music video is not much comfort in times of trouble. They know they have something to fall back on."

As it is, people tune into her when something's on their minds. There have been many frantic phone calls to her house, or awkward silences when teens know what they want to say but don't know how to say it.

"And that's what I want to see happen, rather than they hold it all inside, not knowing what to do with emotions. Some things are really embarrassing, too. Sometimes (when they phoned me with questions), they feel stupid or feel they should know the answer."

Getting teenagers to talk in more than three-word sentences is often difficult, as most parents know. Teens might not be deliberately keeping things from them, but how could parents, who are so old, understand what it's like to be a teenager nowadays? (Many parents can probably remember wondering the same thing about their parents.)

"It's always a challenge to keep the group open and communicating," Mrs. Stevens admits. "Most teens are not secure enough to open themselves. It takes a while for them to trust you, too."

However, she wishes she had a male co-leader for the boys to relate with. Mrs. Stevens has no problems getting the girls to talk, yet doesn't have that same easy rapport with the boys, who are even more prone to keeping their feelings inside.

Hi-Y's approach is a cross between Sunday School and church services, geared for teenagers in Grade 7 through 13. It's interdenominational and because Flora Jean Phillips babysits Mrs. Stevens' two sons while she's with the group, it's held at St. George's Anglican Church.

What started out primarily as Bible Study several years ago has developed more into a youth group with a Christian slant. They start with a half hour of singing and follow that with worship time, opening prayer, Bible Study for an hour, closing prayer and then "snacks and a chat."

Plans are underway for "Mario's Italian Night", a romantic spaghetti dinner on April 27 complete with checkered table cloths, elegantly dressed waiters, and, fire codes accepting, candles on the tables.

The fundraising project is a present from Nada Vaughan, whose recipes were very popular in The Echo until the Vaughans moved to Newmarket. Her new church youth group had tried the same thing and as it was very successful, Mrs. Vaughan suggested it to the Haliburton teenagers who were visiting a few weeks ago.

motorists driving the highways do, and announce that there was a mini traffic tie-up in Haliburton due to a deer on the side of the road.

A series of incidents then happened, all within the span of one week, which made her appreciate again the magic of living in this beautiful part of the country. One evening she and her boyfriend were walking along the road by the lake. It was getting dark. There were no cars on the road since it was a week-day and they were slowly ambling along, the dog ahead of the, the cat following behind. It was the perfect ending to a hectic day; much better than sitting in front of the TV to unwind. Except for a beaver splashing in its pond by the side of the road as they walked by, all was quiet. This silence was soothing to the nerves and the smell of spring was fresh in the air.

Suddenly they heard a loud rustling off to the side.

They stopped, listened and looked. More rustling and then not ten feet away they saw a series of moving shadows and the tell-tale white bouncing away into the trees. A deer had been almost close enough to touch. What a strange and intimate feeling it gave them to know they had been so close yet unaware of its presence. The dog was still busy trotting along ahead of them, quite unaware of what it had missed. The cat of course, couldn't have cared less.

Two days later she was driving the same route with her daughter on their way to town. It was close to noon, not the time of day you would expect to see any wildlife. But there, in the middle of the road, was a doe and younger deer. Not a fawn, but not quite full grown either. Probably last spring's crop. The two deer stood stock still then slowly made their way across to the other side of the road. They slowed the car down enough to get a good long look at these elegant animals picking their way back into the bush. As always, the unexpectedness of their appearance added to its impact.

Then, as though trying to make a point, nature provided another little treat. Again, the same road near their house, again in the car, she and her daughter were on their way to visit friends after supper. It was getting close to dusk, but still the sun cast its long-rayed golden light between the trees. Her daughter was driving, trying to get as much practice for her driver's exam as possible.

Out of the corner of her eye she saw what a first she thought was a big black dog standing on the shoulder of the road. Looking again to see if it was about to dart in front of the vehicle, she realized it was no dog; it was a bear. Speaking quickly, so as not to lose the opportunity, yet not so fast as to startle her daughter, she pointed the bear out to the novice driver. Her daughter's first reaction of course, was to slam on the brakes, not a good idea in the middle of the road. After a quick moment of consideration, the young driver pulled the car over toward the side of the road and her mother pulled out the hazard lights button. It was not a busy road, but other cars have a way of appearing when you least expect or want them. They watched the bear, who watched them. Then it turned away from the road and they saw it was not alone.

"Oh Mom, look at the cubs," her daughter said, trying to watch both the road and the animals at the same time. Sure enough, two tiny versions of the big bear were tumbling over each other to follow their mother. They could not have been more than a few weeks old, for they looked like black teddy bears in a toy store window. They scampered after the adult, bumping into bushes and stumbling over stumps, while the full grown bear led them away from the perceived danger.

The next day was a beautiful warm spring day, the kind they had been waiting for all month. Raccoons had been out on the road the night before, thick as thieves and doing whatever raccoons do after a spring rain. Again she was speeding along Highway 35, just approaching Minden. It was still early in the morning and she was feeling pretty good about the change in weather.

Unfortunately this mood was altered when she saw the twisted form on the highway. A skunk lay very dead on the pavement, the obvious victim of a vehicle. Now to some, a skunk cannot be compared to a deer or bear for importance. But she had seen them moving undisturbed across the forest floor. Their fur is long and silky in appearance. If left alone, they do less damage than raccoons or porcupines. Yet the very name can conjure up scorn on many a human face. However, to see such a pathetic sight on the highway, a victim that had more than met its match with a four wheeled killer, bothered her immensely.

She thought of the paradox of the modern car. While it has opened up areas once closed to humans and enabled us to see what is but a memory in more populated areas, that same car kills more creatures than one would wish to contemplate. There is no solution to this dilemma. It is the way it is. All she as a motorist could do was appreciate what she was fortunate enough to see and exercise as much caution and caring as possible. She knew she wanted her daughter to catch a glimpse of the Great Blue Heron she saw standing in the beaver pond as she drove by on her way home that night. The heron never even raised its head as she passed by.

More needs to be done in area dumps ones at the stores. We have been in the forefront of environmental change.

When some recycling bins appeared we thought that, finally, our worries were over. However, there is still trouble at our dumps. We are disgusted with what we see.

Where there are bins they are not always used properly and they are not used by everyone. There is no arrangement for safely discarding toxic materials such as old cans of paint, partly used containers of insecticides and pesticides, left-over toxic cleaners, oil, and oil solvents and more.

We ask that every dump have clearly marked recycling bins and an official on duty when a dump is open to actively supervise, explain and promote correct use of the facility.

We ask that there be information in the press and handed out at the dump on the dangers of toxic waste. And that places and times be available for their safe disposal to prevent the dangerous pollution of our lakes and drinking water.

We ask that these measures be in place before we welcome our summer people, who are equally anxious about the environment and who will appreciate the changes which you make—changes which will ensure that Haliburton County remains a safe, healthy, beautiful place.

Thank you,
Eagle Lake Women

A spring ode on some lakeside reflections

Nature's Lament

Warm gentle breezes are now stirring on the lake, Telling creatures everywhere it's time to awake. For timeless regeneration, as nature moves along, Spring toads chirp, songbirds call—the loon, his precious song.

Days grow still warmer when freshly built nests, filmy egg clusters and burrowed sanctuaries to the hidden eye appear.

But then with summer's bounty comes a menace for all to fear.

Screaming speedboats spewing toxic waste,, Beer cans and fast food wrappers carelessly tossed in haste.

Noisy, careless creatures, oblivious and indifferent.

Advances in technology have made them feel omniscient.

How can we make them appreciate, how can we make them pause?

camper van right off the 401, west of Metro. Mary Stephens, a cottager who visits Haliburton from London, and is active with the International Council of Women, filled me in on what the lobby group was trying to pull off — and what a citizens' group was trying to do to fight them — and I wrote another column telling you more. Under the leadership of the Hamilton branch of the Canadian Automobile Association a write-in campaign was launched. At the same time, the Council of Women made a presentation that included my columns and loads of other material to a hearing a Queen's Park in June of '88, and it all apparently had some impact.

Ed Fulton announced on June 20th that year that "The Ministry is not considering any increase in the allowable length for commercial vehicles from the present 23 metres (75 feet). This includes the operation of extended trains."

In October of 1989 then new Minister of Transportation, Bill Wye, reaffirmed the government's position — only to turn around just one month later — at a trucking association conference — and announced that he was going for the longer trucks after all!

This is another promise that the Liberals apparently feel they want to keep — pay attention, Elinor — and they have put the truckers version of the legislation before the house as Bill 96 and already given it two readings.

This, in spite of the all the facts that continue to filter through to the media — while they are busy shouting about Temagami, Meech, the GST and all the other things that daily papers find so delicious.

Facts like the spring safety blitz last year, where inspectors had to take one out of every five trucks they inspected off the road.

Or that fatal accidents involving trucks have gone up every year, with trucks involved in 26.5 per cent most recently, even though they represent less than 18 per cent of the vehicles on the road.

The truckers are telling the public that these monster trucks are already approved in Western Canada. What they are not telling people is that the density of trucks per mile (or kilometer) in the Western Provinces is within a percentage point of the Canadian average of 13.6%.

In Ontario it is nearly three times that much — a whopping 46.3%. If you feel like you're already surrounded by giant trucks on our roads — you're right! And we don't need 'em any bigger or any longer.

If you agree, just send this column to:

The Hon. William Wye,
Minister of Transportation,
3rd Floor, Ferguson Block,
77 Wellesley Street West,
TORONTO. M7A 1Z8.

Last time, the Canadian Automobile Association credited the effect of people writing letters, writing columns and making presentations with getting the monster truck legislation halted.

Maybe if there's an election in the wind, the Ontario government might start listening to the people again!

Hi-Y lets teenagers talk

"We haven't raised money for charity which I think is so important," says Gerald. "We have lots of time and resources so we should help someone else out."

More and more outside activities are being arranged. Many of the teens just returned from a retreat, and everyone was invited for tobogganing at the Risks' farm in Essonville. There'll be picnics and ball games this summer as well.

"We don't want to skirt Bible Study but there's more than that," says Mrs. Stevens. "We want to make them into a group because there's not much support for them and they need to know there are adults who can talk to them at their level."

Now that local clergy can't go into the schools, Mrs. Stevens feels it's even more important for adults to reach out to teenagers. "The adults, not just ministers, have to provide alternate routes to these kids so they don't get dragged into something they shouldn't be involved in."

"Our society has become extremely tolerant and tolerant for too much and unless we change some things, we're going to go nowhere fast. Basic Christianity is missing and that's not doing our teens any favours. But the workers are few. I can only establish so many relationships that are close."

Pastor Brian Plouffe of Lakeside Baptist Church is arranging a meeting in May for anyone who is interested in youth work. He should be contacted for more information.

And while he thinks it's a good idea for more teenagers to become involved with youth groups,

Gerald says it's not for everyone. "There has to be something within them. They have to be questioning and have that basic desire to talk about God."

Talk about God? Teenagers? Mrs. Stevens, Sarah, Shawn and Gerald believe more teenagers should give it a try. Instead of opening them up to ridicule or mockery, such discussions might open the door to discovering more about themselves.

Tackle the future together: Eakins

'We must be prepared'

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Co-operation is the key for municipalities suffering growing pains associated with increasing development, says Victoria-Haliburton MPP John Eakins.

Municipal councillors had the opportunity to strengthen relations with their building officials at the special meeting in Lindsay last Thursday. Building Better Communities brought the two together for an all-day seminar at the Admiral Inn with Eakins as a featured speaker. The meeting was presented by the Kawartha, Haliburton and District Chapter of the Ontario Building Officials Associations.

Eakins stressed the importance of good relations, not only between council and its Chief Building Official, but with other municipalities as well.

More people are moving from Metro to the Kawarthas, and municipalities in the Victoria-Haliburton areas are feeling the pressures of increasing development. "We must be prepared to keep abreast of public issues," said Eakins.

Smaller municipalities are having difficulty dealing with such rapid growth. This is one reason Eakins, the former Minister of Municipal Affairs, initiated work toward a review of the county government system.

"Can we deal with the pressure of growth with a government system put together 140 years ago?" he asked.

If the review suggested a need, restructuring would occur as municipalities amalgamate to form a larger population base. A report on county reform recommends a minimum population of 4,000 people.

Eakins suggested municipalities must work together to meet the challenges of development pressures, waste management, and county reform.

He also noted that municipal offices require knowledgeable employees to help guide councils. "I think our elected people realize it's very important to have the best staff... you're all winners," Eakins told the crowd.

It would be a good idea if retired professionals would assist councils. Many have backgrounds which would help them deal with municipal issues. "Make use of retirees who move up to a country setting," Eakins said. "There are people there with expertise waiting to be tapped."

With more municipalities experiencing growth, industry is required to keep economic growth on line, said Eakins.

"To attract commercial industry to your communities, you have to know the answers," he addressed

'To move along you must have quality people in place,' MPP John Eakins, at left, told local councillors and municipal officials last Thursday. He wants reeves, such as Harry Davis of Stanhope and Bryce Young of Somerville, above, to work together.

the Chief Building Officials. "They want the answers from you. When people first come to an area, they don't go to the Chamber of Commerce or warden for help. It's the CBO who has the answers."

"To move along, you must have quality people in place."

When people are moving into an area, they look for co-operation between neighbouring municipalities. "They don't look at the boundary lines," said Eakins.

"People are looking at quality development and quality work. You people have to know your job."

As the pressure of development moves north, municipal staff must know all the issues and keep things in line with the Municipal Act and the Building Code.

"We have the basis and foundation to deal with waste management, development and county reform, and to serve people better, to become a little better informed and understanding."

Other speakers at the meeting also stressed the pivotal role played by the Chief Building Official when development matters are dealt with.

Uniformity of practices between neighbouring municipalities is maintained by the provincial Building Code. Although building officials must change as the development trends, wishes and dreams of the current council change, they must always follow the guidelines laid out by the province.

Building officials were urged to stick to the Code, and not be swayed by the wishes of any council members who want to bend the rules "just a little" to help out a developer.

The importance of a good liaison between building officials and the municipal clerk, who is in direct contact with council, was also noted.

Many municipal staff members and councillors from Haliburton County turned out for the seminar, including Ernie Roylance of Lutterworth, Doug Brohm of Snowdon, Reeve Harry Davis and Councillor Murray Daniels of Stanhope, Donna McCallum and Dick Schell of Dysart et al and Reeve Ray Moore and Tom Hubercheck of Anson, Hindon and Minden.

Let council know you're watching, planner says

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Ratepayers with development concerns must send a message that they are keeping tabs on their municipality, says Senior Planner Richard Brady.

Living in harmony with your municipality was the message stressed by Brady, speaking at the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations spring seminar at the Sheraton Toronto East Hotel on Saturday. The meeting's theme was Intelligent Planning for Development in Cottage Country.

"You can't force municipalities to have an official plan, but it's a good idea," Brady told the group of cottage association executives. "If you don't have a comprehensive framework to deal with issues, you're fighting a rear guard battle."

"You can't make changes case by case. You must send a message to the municipality that you will always be checking up on them."

Brady described an official plan as a general goal statement which reflects (or should reflect) the wishes of the people. "There is no reason at all that the goal statement can't address the natural environment."

If an unwanted development is approved, and you make an appeal at an Ontario Municipal Board hearing, "it's a stronger argument if there's a goal statement in the official plan which relates to your concerns," said Brady.

The provincial Planning Act doesn't set any content requirements for official plans, said Brady. All content is dealt with by the municipality.

Brady says he feels this is the best method, because different areas require specified restrictions.

"A 15 metre buffer setback from lakes would be ridiculous for all lakes," he said. "What works for your cottage lake won't work for mine. Mine is Lake Erie."

A development process should be specified by ratepayers and brought to the municipality to consider for its official plan, said Brady.

"The OP can specify what's needed from the developer and put an onus on the developer to provide information before any approval is given. Then, if the development is passed without the specified requirements, you can better address your appeal to the Ontario Municipal Board."

When an official plan is being drafted, ratepayers shouldn't be shy about checking the credentials of the municipal planner. "Make sure the municipality has qualified professionals doing the work," said Brady.

Addressing the question of whether ratepayers should urge their municipalities to take part in an environmental assessment, Brady suggested this would open a Pandora's Box. "You cannot, without a lot of effort, not provide for an area to be developed in some fashion. "It's very difficult to suggest that development will not happen in a particular area. You may define environmentally sensitive areas, but you can't stop development altogether."

Environmental Advisory Committees are a good tool for ensuring preservation of the environment, suggested Brady. "They can review policies and developments and the overall official plan. They act as a good liaison. Often you learn that what governments want and individuals want are one and the same."

A proposal for such a committee was turned last year by Anson, Hindon and Minden council. Cardiff and

Early queries can change plans

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Municipal councils don't have to give a commitment of approval to developments before all concerns are addressed, says a director with the Ministry of Municipal Affairs.

Peter Boles was a speaker at the annual spring seminar of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations on Saturday at the Sheraton Toronto East Hotel. The Director of Plans with the ministry's administration branch addressed the meeting's theme of Intelligent Planning for Development in Cottage Country: How You Can Make It Happen.

"Councils can request any information they need before approving a development," said Boles. "There's no sense looking at the hydrogeological aspects of a plan after doing an official plan amendment. That way the horse is gone, and you're locking the barn door."

Wendy Noble, the ministry's Director of Planning Policy Branch, added that councils must ensure developments comply with regulations under the Municipal Act. "The OMB (Ontario Municipal Board, which hears appeals) takes things very seriously," she said. "Developers have to comply unless there's a very good reason not to."

Boles said there is often confrontation between seasonal residents and local governments. But if cottagers want to make a change, they must become involved early in the local planning and political process, he said.

Several complaints have been made against over-sized "monster cottages" which are changing the character of a lake in the Muskoka district, said Boles. When such "monster homes" began springing up in city areas, general amendments were made by many councils to limit the height of homes.

"That's a good illustration of a local political process reacting to concerns," said Boles. "You must get to the root of a problem, instead of dealing with it on an application by application process."

Many cottagers are concerned their municipalities don't have an official plan. Boles said although they are encouraged, official plans aren't mandatory.

Reviews are considered every five years and include public input, "but by then it could be too late," he said.

Ministry funding assistance is available to municipalities to review, repair and revise their official plans, Boles said. (Some municipalities, such as Minden, have been on a waiting list for funds.)

Boles urged cottagers to get involved during the evolution of their municipality's official plan. "Land use and development plans should reflect the desires of the people."

During a question and answer period, Fran Snelling of the Brady Lake Property Owners Association expressed frustration that the County of Haliburton is just starting to develop its official plan.

She also complained about wasted efforts of her association in taking part in a lakeshore capacity study for fisheries and wildlife. "Once it was completed, we couldn't get any information," she said. "The study was scrapped."

Snelling said it's difficult for cottagers to deal with municipalities which are only open during the week. "We go up on weekends, and they are only open from 9 to 3," she lamented. (Anson, Hindon and Minden's municipal office is actually open 9-5 p.m.)

Nobel sympathized with Snelling's problems with the lakeshore capacity model. "It was never completed because the issues were far too complicated," she said. "Twenty years ago, we were a bit more naive and optimistic. Those models look at only one small slice of a lake environment."

"One of the issues we must look at is, how good is our technology to analyze environmental aspects of a development."

Elected representative provides voice

Seasonal residents who want to keep tabs on development along their lakes have been encouraged to sit on cottage country councils by a member of the Ontario Municipal Board.

Jim Mills discussed how to prepare for and attend an OMB appeal hearing during the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations annual spring seminar at the Sheraton Toronto East Hotel on Saturday.

"You've probably got at least one permanent (retired) seasonal resident in each of your associations," said Mills. "Why let them sit and vegetate? If you have a cottager on council, then you've got the eyes and the ears right in front of you."

Most cottagers expressed concern they feel like outsiders in the municipalities where they own seasonal property. And Mills agreed they are often treated as such. "Councils hate to say no to their

Economic growth and environmental concerns should go hand in hand, says the parliamentary assistant to Minister of Municipal Affairs John Sweeney.

Bill Ballinger, MPP for Durham-York, addressed the theme of Intelligent Planning For Development In Cottage Country during Saturday's spring seminar of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations at the Sheraton Toronto East Hotel.

"Cottagers are environmentalists and naturalists," said Ballinger.

Artist's work casts a happy glow over gallery, young critics agree

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

GRADE 1 AND 2 STUDENTS may not know a lot about perspective and two-point view for a picture that's been cut in half, but they do know their colours. That's what made them perfect critics of Jerry Coulas's show at the Rails' End Gallery.

"It caught my eye that he used a lot of bright colours," Cole Glendinning says of his first impressions of Colours of Memories, Colours of Dreams. "It felt like it was a nice place."

"It makes me feel like there's a lot of nice people here," Alicia Saes says with a smile. Many professional art critics would do well to emulate.

"I think it's like you're right there at the farm," adds Jesse Boughner.

Indeed. The Harcourt artist's paintings are echoes of his youth on a farm, a youth which his paintings suggest is worth living again through art.

"It was a really wonderful time in my life," Mr. Coulas says. "What these kids are describing are things I'm trying to convey in my paintings. Bright colours, happy moods and good times. I like to paint things people are familiar with."

"It's an adult perspective maintaining the child-like wonder of the world," Curator Elene Freer says of Mr. Coulas's work. "It's something we all need to maintain; it's quite marvellous."

The Victoria Street School visitors pick out their favourites. That cat "might be thinking there's a mouse to catch," says Celeste Butz. Or, Adam Henry suggests, "it might be thinking 'What are all these people doing here?'"

Some wonder how the paint looks like silk. Cole Glendinning, who obviously knows an artist's trials and tribulations, is impressed by another technique. "They're nice neat paintings and they're not smudged. He's trying to keep his elbows off the paper."

When the students start questioning Mr. Coulas on how long it takes to do this picture, and that picture, they're asked why it's so important for them to know. "If you ever grew up to be a painter and you didn't know how long it took, you would get frustrated," Cole notes.

"When I spend a lot of time with a painting, I get very attached to it and it's difficult to present it to the world," Mr. Coulas tells them. But like them, he really likes sharing his work. That is what art is all about.

The critics nodded.

Would any of them want to be artists when they grow up? More than half put up their hands. Then let's pretend it's 30 years from now and they want to paint the things which were important to them when they were seven. What would they paint?

"I'd paint Victoria Street School because it gives me a really nice feeling inside," says Catherine Hagerman.

"I'd paint my grandma and grandpa," adds another. He never met his grandfather who died in the war, but he'll always remember his grandmother working away in the kitchen.

"I'd paint my horse," says Josh Roadknight, "because it makes me feel good when I brush my horse and saddle him."

With a sideways look at teacher Chris Lynd, Jordan Bain says "I'd paint my teachers. They teach me things so I know I'm going to be grown up."

Galleries can teach them things, too, Mrs. Lynd remarks. "They see what we're talking about in class and it brings it all together for them." Many of the children will now try some of the techniques they've just seen. "It's inspiration for them to go further, to take what they do and go one more step."

"If we didn't come here, they wouldn't see all the things that are available to them."

Teacher Jane Miller has also noted there seems to be a tie between artistic and reading abilities. The better the art skills, the better the reading skills, so Mrs. Miller considers exposure to art an important part of their development. "It's part of their growing."

"When I spend a lot of time with a painting, I get very attached to it and it's difficult to present it to the world," Jerry Coulas told these Victoria Street School students when they came to the Rails' End Gallery to critique his show.

HODGSON HIGHLIGHTS

by: J. Douglas Hodgson
Elementary School Students

by JENNIFER DUNFORD

IN THE LAST EDITION, the Grade 8 enrichment students talked about the academic part of our school so the Grade 7's thought we would tell you about some other things happening in our school.

As some of you know, Earth Day was April 22 and we tried to help solve some of the problems of our environment. Musician Doug Cutler came in with his synthesizer and did some rapping on the environment. We're also taking time to talk about some of the issues in class.

In the front foyer there are some stuffed animals in the garden to represent the endangered species of the rainforest.

Some students did a survey and collected all the lunchtime garbage to see how much our school actually produced. In 2 days our school produced 51 lbs of leftover food and 157 gallons of paper bags, drinking boxes and wrappers.

Our whole school went on a parade into town on Friday, April 20 reminding people about Earth Day. I hope you saw and enjoyed it and understand that we care about our world and what happens to it.

Another fun thing was the door decorating contest. Each class in the whole school had to decorate their homeroom door and the theme was "School Spirit". In the Grade 3, 4 and 5 level, Mrs. Bailey's Grade 3 room won, in the 6, 7 and 8 level, Mrs. Lewis' 8B room won. The prize for winning is one free hot dog or donut for each student in the class at the next hot dog day.

At noon there are lots of things to do such as chess club, computers and floor hockey. The Grade 7s had a ping-pong competition in the winter. About 35 people entered. We had a few practice games and then we got into the contest. You had to lose two games before you were out and couldn't play anymore. The final winner was Ken Clements with Jamie Thivierge in second place. When it was all over Ken had a game with our principal, Mr. Devolin and Ken won.

With spring coming, there are a lot of new activities at recess, such as skipping, baseball, football and tetherball. Mrs. Bain is especially busy this time of year because of the little kids running through the mud and falling in it. She has to run the dryer in the Family Studies room for them.

Although our school has been recycling and caring about the rainforest, there is another way some other students have tried to make this a better place. They have written letters and now have pen-pals in Russia to try to promote friendship and peace in our world.

Be ready for development

Lutterworth Townships have environment committees which report to council. But Brady suggests they are more appropriate at a county level.

The problem with those who oppose development is that "municipal planning is primarily development driven." Brady said you often can't get any environmental information on an area until a development is proposed.

"The costs are something developers should handle, but by then it could be too late. You will always be besieged by development. You can't say, 'nothing will happen next to me.' There will always be something—it may be something nice."

"But you can't complain that you weren't warned. Now, you're warned."

Brady also warned those who consider an appeal to the Ontario Municipal Board, a costly and arduous process, to be prepared.

"Take a look at the development proposal, see if there's merit. However, I can suggest that if an application has merit, an appeal is basically a waste of time."

Municipal staff must answer to the province in their day-to-day jobs, said Brady. Often, if a council approves a development it is because there is no other choice. If the development falls in line with provincial guidelines, council risks being taken to the Board by the developer if it is rejected.

"I've seen conflicts between municipalities and citizens' groups that neither of them can deal with. For those problems, complain to the province."

Many people feel developments should go through an Environmental Assessment Act process, rather than the Planning Act process. But Brady says this is futile.

"If you're going to pursue Environmental Acts as the answer to planning problems, I think you'll find yourself barking up a tree that's falling down."

Brady also offered a message from a Canadian Geographic article to some development-hungry municipal governments in tourism based areas: "Politicians jeopardize environment at their peril."

Information available

But what you need to succeed is evidence. "Keep your ideas to yourself."

Mills also suggested anyone with an appeal discuss their concerns with the municipal planner involved in council's decision, "and possibly subpoena him or her to act as your witness. That won't cost you anything."

Before the hearing, Mills said you should speak to your opponent and say that you've hired a planner, lawyer, hydrologist, etc. "They'll think, 'My God, do I have to do all that?'" You may be able to reach a settlement and avoid the hearing altogether.

Mills said cottagers should attend council meetings. And, since most cottagers' associations invite councils to their annual meetings, he suggested they also invite the municipal planner. "Ask what applications are coming up."

Those with concerns over proposed development should regularly request minutes from the meetings of councils, the committee of adjustments and the land divisions committee, Mills suggested.

"They may want you to pay for photocopies, even though you pay taxes. But don't complain. They think of you as a city slicker."

And, with so many cottagers complaining that they aren't notified of changes in the municipalities, Mills urged that they subscribe to the local newspapers. "You're not going to learn about what's planned on that lot next to your cottage by reading the Toronto Star."

Senior Games are on a roll, participation encouraged

KINMOUNT & AREA NEWS

by: MILLIE MOSS

Marg and Ross Roberts along with Joan Bowins and Betty Adams all of Coboconk recently travelled to Atlantic City for a four day holiday but while there Betty had to be taken to hospital following a heart attack. I understand she has been in hospital since arriving home and we all wish her back to good health soon.

Victoria County will be having a bowling game for seniors on Wednesday, May 16 at 1:30 p.m. in the Lindsay Bowling Lanes.

You are asked to please let your seniors group know if you plan to attend.

Due to lack of participation there will be no more monthly dances for the Norland area seniors and that is sad because the 25 or so folks who did come out regularly really enjoyed the evening.

Commencing the first Thursday evening in May the seniors will be playing euchre and bridge at 8:00 p.m. All cordially invited to attend.

We've enjoyed a couple of visits of late from Bob Marsh of RR.1, Kinmount.

Bonnie Walker of Don Mills spent part of her Easter holiday visiting with Helen Graham, Mary and John Pyke and at our house.

Hope to hear Marg Roberts of Coboconk is feeling better soon.

There will be bridge games at Coboconk Legion May 1 at 1:30 p.m. Anyonewho may be interested please call 454-1404. Bowling at the Lindsay Bowling Lanes May 16-17 at 1:30 p.m. Call 887-5193 for further information. Please notify one week in advance. All these events are Victoria County Senior Games.

If you have anything you wish to donate towards the Norland Seniors yard sale, please call Lloyd Brown at 454-1509. The sale will be held August 4 but more on that later.

Winner of the Norland Volunteer Firemen's Hockey Pool for Saturday, April 14 was Dave Lee of RR.1, Norland.

Once again it is that time of year for all Seniors to enjoy a little friendly competition in Victoria, Durham and Northumberland Counties, starting in May and ending with a banquet and dance on June 21 in Lindsay. Looks like a great summer planned, now all we can hope for is summer itself to arrive.

For information and registration forms for the upcoming events you may call 454-3489 in the Norland area and for other Seniors who wish to join in the fun you may contact your closest Seniors Club. All registrations must be in by May 1st. You may enter as many of the activities as you wish but will have to choose one only for the finals which will start May 29a for the three counties.

More of the games include bridge May 8, 1:30pm at Fenelon Falls Seniors; euchre May 10 at 1:30pm at Cambray; snooker May 15 at 9am at Lindsay Armoury; cribbage May 16 at 9am at Coboconk Legion; darts May 16 at 1:30pm Coboconk Legion; shuffleboard May 17 at 9am Lindsay Armoury; carpet ball May 22 at 10am Dunsford; walking May 23 at 10am Norland; swimming May 23 at 10am Lindsay Aquatorium; tennis May 25 at 9am Lindsay; horseshoes May 28 at 9am Fenelon Legion; and many more events on into June. Hope many of you attend.

Amy and Larry Coker of Utterson visited Helen Graham, Mary and John

Pyke in Norland on Wednesday, April 18.

A whole busload of happy seniors travelled to the Coboconk Legion Wednesday evening April 18 where they sat down to a delicious roast beef dinner with all the trimmings complete with apple pie, all they could eat and served by the Coboconk Legion Ladies Auxiliary in ten minutes. The ladies took their due congratulations on an excellent meal and then the seniors left there and by bus went to the Lindsay Academy Theatre where they thoroughly enjoyed the show, "A Breath Of Scotland".

Welcome home from Florida Mina and Linda.

The Big Brothers / Big Sisters Organization of Lindsay is looking for donations towards an upcoming yard sale on June 9. It can be dropped off at their office at 6 Lindsay Street North in Lindsay or you could leave any donations with me and I will see that a Big Brother in our area picks it up. Thanks in advance.

Intended for last week.

Kirkfield Seniors held a very successful and happy time Saturday evening, April 7 when some 200 people came out to the lovely new Kirkfield Lions Club for a roast beef dinner, floor show and later retiring to another room in the hall for an evening of card playing. Thanks to all who helped, you did a terrific job.

Congratulations to the Fenelon Falls Secondary Senior School's Reach For The Top scholars who have defeated all local high schools once again and will compete provincially. Also the Sears Drama District winners for "Encounter" with congratulations also going to staff director Chris Jackson. The play "Encounter" took second place in Oshawa recently. While we are into congratulations we mustn't forget Fenelon Falls Secondary School's Champion Grade 11 Canadian Mathematics Competition winners who were first among 39 local high schools and last but not

"We consider our lake country a heaven on earth. We have to have sustainable and stable economic growth" for the benefit of permanent residents. "But we must also make sure our environment is not lost."

Those who live in cottage country are concerned with preserving the environment in order to maintain an industry based on tourism and recreation, said Ballinger, noting that these areas rely on healthy lakes.

"There's economic and social need on the one hand, environment protection on the other. So we must choose development which enhances, rather than endangers, the environment."

Ballinger said local municipalities may not be the ones who should take responsibility for testing lakes for development capacity because watersheds know no boundaries. "Water is a shared resource, so we must share the responsibility."

He also noted that municipalities with a population of 65-20,000 people don't have the tax base or resources to take on this responsibility.

Ballinger offered much praise in response to the growing number of counties, such as Haliburton, which are working on official plans.

"It certainly is an encouraging sign for us that more and more counties are getting involved," he said. "It's the beginning of a county vision."

He urged that members of the community take part in the formation of these official plans, "so we can start with policies which will spell out our goals."

Ballinger said there have been many changes in the planning process over the years. "You never used to have to hold a public meeting before making changes. We would just circulate to people 400 feet away. Next thing, you'd wake up living next to a high-rise apartment."

He admits there is a shortage of staff within the ministry, making it difficult to deal with all concerns. "We've got some growing to do. There is a check and balance system in Ontario, and it works."

'We'll eat lots of candy and to heck with our teeth,' these visitors from Jupiter (Debby Almond and Debbie Dean of the health unit) told the students at Gooderham Public School. The youngsters convinced them to change their minds.

'No way' to tooth decay, students tell strange visitors from Jupiter

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

JUMPIN' JUPITER! Did you know that on this far off planet there is a plot to use teeth to build a patio? No? Well at least local children learned how they could fight against such a dastardly deed—brush their teeth after every meal and before bedtime.

"Teeth make better smiles than patios," said Carol Florence, Debby Almond and Debbie Dean in a play presented to young Haliburton County students on Friday. These three associates with the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit's dental office are usually in schools checking teeth and giving fluoride treatments. This time, however, their purpose was prevention, and their method was a fast-paced, informative play.

At the Gooderham school, narrator Ms. Florence is about to explain all about dental health when she's interrupted by the wacky-wigged Ms. Dean, a/k/a 340. This Jupiterite's space ship went off course and landed on the earth. Ms. Florence uses the opportunity to promote tooth brushes and healthy snacks on Jupiter. This seemed like a good idea to 340, who doesn't like it when her teeth get sore when she doesn't take proper care of them.

Other plans are in store for 210. There's a shortage of stone on Jupiter so she is using teeth to build her patio. If people don't take care of their teeth, then more teeth can be pulled out. To add 340's teeth to her collection, 210 pulled out a big, sweet lollipop.

"We'll eat lots of candy and to heck with our teeth," says 210.

Ms. Florence convinces 210—and the school children—this isn't a good idea so they plot to make 340 see the error of her ways. With a song and hints on proper care of teeth, the pro-health side is victorious.

"Down with plaque, siss boom ba! We're for good teeth, ra, ra, ra," everyone yells.

The play over, it's time for the children to ask questions and talk about how often they brush their teeth.

"I do mine once a day and skip a day," one boy says. Is that what he's supposed to do, Ms. Florence asks. No, the children reply. But there's a difference between good intentions and actual habits, they all seem to admit.

Before they left, the health unit troupe distributed tooth brushes and song sheets.

Easter weekend is a time for visiting with family

SENIOR LEAGUE

Wednesday morning there was a uniform sale in the auditorium and a draw, won by Peter Fearrey.

In the evening Earl Cooper and Kathy Owens gave us a lovely time of music. They closed with Kathy playing the accordion, Earl holding the hymn book and they both sang. Thank you Earl and Kathy. We appreciate you coming very much.

Thursday was our tea party. The Haliburton United Church Women were scheduled to come, but for some reason they were unable to. So we wouldn't be disappointed—Mark Schelle and Connie Sawyer served us ice cream cones.

Linda had a loaf cake stored somewhere and with tea we had a sociable time together. Donna Luke and Janke Thomas are volunteers and they served us and took care of those residents who needed their assistance. We thank you all.

At 7 o'clock Tom and Marge Prentice came to call Bingo for us. We do appreciate and thank them. Good Friday afternoon Lorraine Hutchinson came to Hyland Crest for an hour of Easter music and song. Lorraine also read three poems to us. The residents thank her for helping us spend the holiday so nicely.

In the evening the Four Grandfathers came to entertain us: Bill Payne, Eldon Deacon, Ken Hadley, Charlie Hadley, and Don Burch. They played and sang until lunch time. The residents sincerely thank them.

Early last week Nancy Carefoot was taken to Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Good Friday, Ada Turrall was taken to the Minden Hospital. We hope she will soon be able to come home feeling lots better.

Easter Sunday Rev. John Burgess had a chapel service in the evening and Alice Jones played the organ. The residents who attended the service thank both Rev. Burgess and Alice very much.

Those who had visitors this weekend were: Myrtle O'Halloran (several of her grandchildren); Pearl Lyle had her grandson Derrick Hewitt; Cora Upton had her daughter Dorothy Bethune; and Ruby Lewis had her daughters and sons-in-law Doris and Frank, and May and Ray; Gladys Kirkpatrick had her son and wife to visit; Lola Prentice had Nina Prentice and her daughter Eleanor visit from Tally Ho; Lula Ferrill had her son Saturday morning to visit; and Jean Taylor had her niece for lunch.

May Horsley went to visit her daughter for 3 or 4 days. Bob Mitchell's daughter took him for a drive on Saturday. Mary Smith was out for part of Saturday. Marie McPhail went to her daughter's house. Her son-in-law came for her. Pearl Lyle's grandson came and took her out to Jean Hewitt's. Gladys White went home to her daughters for Easter.

I was at my son Terry's for Easter. Terry, Norma, Norma's mother Clara Austin, Kevin and Claudia and I went out for dinner.

Nancy Carefoot came home from Lindsay Monday. Everyone hopes she will continue to improve.

Evelyn Coleman came Monday for Bible Study. We looked at the lives of two women in the old testament: Queen of Sheba and Queen Jezebel.

Tuesday afternoon was game time in the auditorium. There were four tables of euchre, one table of crokinole and two ladies played cribbage

Some ladies came from Kinmount to play. Everyone had an enjoyable time and we wish to thank all those who helped.

Tuesday night York Marion came to show a film. It was of Hyland Crest, about the year 1979. Ada Lewis is about the only one who was in the film, here now.

There are two ladies who are taking a health care course at Sir Sandford Fleming College in Haliburton. They are here for a week helping Doris with activities and Linda with Adjuvant duties. They have been a great help and very adept in their duties.

Tuesday morning service was taken by Rev. Ed

Moll. We sincerely thank him and the residents appreciate his coming for the service.

Wednesday night Pastor Murray from Allsaw Pentacostal Church held a service in the main lounge. There was a good number attended and they thank him and his helpers very much.

Please remember the Lioness Club's yard sale Saturday May 19, 1990. We are in need of good articles for sale, proceeds go to the Bus Fund. For more information please call: Ellen Holden 286-2488, Mary Guillemine—286-5168, Ena Marion—286-1914, Thelma Sliver—489-2356.

least, the midget senior boys basketball teams who have won Kawartha Championships. Best to all of you!

Sympathy to John Hulbig and family of Minden in the death of John's sister April 10.

The family of Herb and Olive Wilson of Kinmount held an open house in honour of their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Saturday, April 21 at the Legion in Kinmount.

Winner of the Norland Volunteer Firemen's Hockey Pool for April 7 was Russell Graham of Norland.

A warm thank you to Aileen Brown of Kinmount who sent me a very thoughtful card this past week and all because I told you about Aileen and George's fiftieth wedding anniversary recently. No need for thanks Aileen, that's what I'm here for, to write about any news you may want aired in this column at any time. You just have to call 454-2395. I'd love to hear from you!

As you can see, there's either no news or something is wrong and by nine o'clock in the morning (April 12), my phone gives busy signals. One lady was even told I was "away in Toronto". Sorry folks, blame "Ma Bell", I was home all day, tried to use the phone once and got a humming noise and gave up. Later in the afternoon

I had one call from F.F.S.S. and now, I'm not getting through to the usual parties.

Better luck next week.

Lions Club to be inaugurated

On January 22, 1990 the Kinmount & District Lions Club was officially recognized as a charter member of the International Association of Lions Clubs. To celebrate this important occasion, we are holding a Charter Night on Saturday, May 5, 1990. Ceremonies include the induction of members, installation of officers and presentation of the charter to the club by District A-16 Governor Harold Harrison.

Festivities begin at the Kinmount Arena with a social hour from 6-7 p.m., roast beef dinner and presentations from 7-9 p.m., followed by dancing to a live band. There will be door prizes, spot dances and raffles. Tickets are available to anyone who would like to attend this occasion.

To obtain tickets, please call: Don Haines (705)488-2219 or 488-2211; or Heather Plumley (705)286-3201.

$400 SAYS YOU'LL ORDER A CAT BY APRIL 30.

Put $200 down on the new fuel injected Wildcat® 700 EFI, one of the new EXT™ or Prowler® Specials, the lively and inexpensive new Lynx®, or any one of our '91 sleds* before April 30, 1990 and you'll get $400 in Cat Cash.* It's $400 you're free to spend on Arcticwear® or on the hundreds of other Arctic Cat parts and accessories that make snowmobiling more fun.

Of course, ordering early also guarantees you'll get the sled you want next season. So stop in and take advantage of this great offer. But hurry. Because Cats have a reputation for going fast.

Athletic scholarship a proud achievement

COBOCONK NEWS

by: SHEILA LAKE

A speedy recovery to Mildred Faulkner, who had surgery in Ross Memorial last week. Mildred will be recuperating at the home of her daughter Linda Mohr, in Lindsay.

Congratulations to Kevin Faulkner, who heads a list of six athletes chosen to receive athletic scholarships to the Frost Campus of Sir Sandford Fleming College. Students who applied last September had to meet the criteria demanded by the College, and will receive $6000 scholarship.

Sincere sympathy to Florence Peel in the death of her mother, Helen McGregor. Helen, who owned a drugstore in Kirkfield and was a Pharmacist there some years ago, passed away on April 10 in Ross Memorial Hospital. Sympathy also goes out to Gordon Kay, in the death of his sister, Mabel Watson, who died on Thursday, April 12 at Resthaven Nursing Home at Aurora.

Olga Weaver is taking therapy in Oshawa to help regain strength, following her stroke in December.

The Norland and Area Seniors enjoyed a delicious supper at the Coboconk Legion Hall, and attended the "Breath of Scotland" performance at the Academy Theatre, with Ronnie Coburn on Wednesday night and report a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. John Falkner and girls, of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brecht of Scarborough; Mr. Lloyd Faulkner and Lawrence Davis of Foxboro; the Norman Harris family of Bexley; Mrs. Laura Archer of Lindsay; Mrs. Christine Vanderburg and Mrs. Ann Irvin, both of Little Britain all were Easter visitors of Ross and Myrtle Faulkner. Mrs. Gwen Rutter spent some time with her daughter Jane Fountain and family at Barrie.

There will be a benefit dance for Michael Potter, in the Burnt River Somerville Centre on May 5 at 8:30 p.m. There will be a contribution box at the door. Bring a pot luck lunch with you. This young man has been very ill for many months and any help you can give would be very deeply appreciated.

Mrs. Ada Fisher of Lindsay was a Saturday visitor at our house.

Bob and Marie Peel are home from a Florida vacation.

Intended for last week:

Herb and Olive Wilson of Kinmount celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on April 21 at the Kinmount Royal Canadian Legion from 2-4 p.m. It was a great way to offer very best wishes to this special couple.

The Coby New Horizons Seniors have a record enrollment of 166 and always welcome even more members. This is a very active group and they are always very busy, in crafts, card games, travel, etc.

While we all appreciate our doctors at the Coboconk Medical Centre, somehow we wish that the doctors were more permanent. We need to be able to see the same doctor on our return visits, not someone else who is just filling in. I trust things will soon get back to normal.

Thank you folks who called to wish me "Happy Birthday" last week.

Check your facts before you help rumours spread

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

by: ERIN LYNCH

WOMEN AND GIRLS are accused of it when giggling and whispering in tight circles. But boys and men also do it; for instance when they're standing at the wall as people pass by. Gossiping: we all do it, teachers and parents included. Why? People enjoy talking about the good and bad. People are curious and like to hear what's happening in other people's lives. Whether it be a car someone received for their 16th birthday or the arrest of a student in one's home form.

The only problem with gossiping is that it leads to rumours. Rumours not only hurt people's feelings but they can also ruin a person's reputation and credibility. Although not all rumours are intentional they usually start off as a story which has been misinterpreted and turned around.

This may have happened to you: It's a Monday morning and you're standing at your locker. A friend comes up to you and says, "You would not believe what I heard. I don't know if it's true so don't say anything but..." A few minutes after she tells you the shocking tale, you see someone else walking down the hallway, so you stop them and repeat the same story just as a teacher passes by and hears the ending.

Not only have you revealed some shocking story that you promised not to tell, but you don't even know if it's true. Did the friend who told you hear the story from the victim's mouth or did she hear it the same way you did? Maybe she overheard someone else's conversation on the bus this morning and just assumed it had to be about you know who. Do you see how rumours can start? The poor victim may have done nothing!

I don't expect everyone to stop gossiping now, but before you start to tell someone something you have heard, it might be a good idea to question if it came from a reliable source and if the rumour gets around, will it hurt the person. Think twice before you speak about someone else because maybe next Monday morning they will be talking about you!

The French Club went to Toronto last Wednesday to see Les Miserables at the Royal Alexandra theatre. Everyone seemed to enjoy it and afterwards they went to a French restaurant called Le Pappillon.

This Thursday is track and field day. I guess we'll have to wait and see what records are broken this year. We hope it will be a nice day and all who are and aren't participating can get a tan.

Remember this Friday is the video dance.

How to ride a bike...

Five-year-old Emily Newell of Haliburton is having problems keeping her balance as she learns to ride a bicycle. So her dad, Doug, came up with a unique suggestion: They went to the last remaining train tracks in Haliburton County, in front of the Rails' End Gallery, where Emily practiced walking on the rails. It's hard work to ride a bike and now Emily knows that this former favourite past-time isn't that easy either. Unfortunately, it's not known yet whether the method works.

Fundamental #1:

"COULD YOU SELL YOUR OWN HOME?"

Of course you could! But, whether you should or would even want to will depend largely on your answers to these questions.

1 Do you have sufficient knowledge of current (and ever-changing) market conditions to price your home properly, to put it on the market at a price that will be attractive both to yourself and prospective buyers?

2 Do you have the skills to advertise and market your property effectively? Do you know how much advertising costs?

3 Do you have a network of contacts who can produce potential buyers for your home?

4 Are you a good negotiator? Will you be unnerved by aggressive buyers looking for bargains?

5 Do you have time to show your home to prospects? They may want to look around when it's convenient to them, not necessarily to you.

6 Even if you have the time, can you deal objectively with negative comments some prospects may make about your home? Not everyone will share your taste in decor or appreciate your improvements.

7 Can you determine who among prospects is serious and has the necessary assets to buy, as opposed to someone who is merely making frivolous enquiries? You could be stuck with a buyer who can't get mortgage financing when the deal is about to close.

8 And speaking of mortgages, are you able to help a prospect arrange the necessary financing?

9 Are you conversant with the many laws and regulations that affect property ownership? You could find yourself in some difficulty with a buyer to whom you've not disclosed certain facts because you didn't know about them.

Most people feel they have neither the time nor the skills to undertake the sale of a home. They prefer to rely on REALTORS — licensed or registered real estate specialists who are members of their local real estate board.

REALTORS can answer 'yes' to all the above questions. REALTOR SERVICES make the transfer of property from one owner to another as painless as possible for all concerned. REALTORS can put an army of salespeople to work selling your home through the Multiple Listing Service (MLS) but you deal with only one person — the REALTOR you select. And, you'll pay that REALTOR not one cent unless or until your house is sold, no matter how long it stays on the market.

REALTORS subscribe to a strict Code of Ethics. They work in the communities where they live. The most successful among them do well because they generate repeat business from satisfied clients.

Want to sell your home? Contact your local REALTOR.

... that can make a REAL difference!

REALTOR is a registered certification mark which identifies real estate licensees who are members of the and adhere to a strict Code of Ethics and Standards of Business Practice.

THANK YOU

THANK YOU. The Ladies Auxiliary, Branch 129, Royal Canadian Legion, wish to express our sincere THANKS to all those in the community who helped make our annual Zone F-4 Convention, which we hosted, such a success. We especially thank the OPP for their assistance with the parade, the Haliburton Legion Pipe Band, the 1129 Cadet Corp, our Padre, Rev. John Phillips, our youthful trumpeter, Damon Smith, The Echo, in particular Martha Perkins for her coverage of the event, Branch 129 for all their assistance and all the merchants who so kindly donated articles for our "goodie bags". We had a great day—all made possible by the community spirit shown by so many. We are grateful.

THE JASCO DRUG MART

TYKES would like to say how glad we were to have 2 such terrific coaches — Mr. Rick Wood and Mr. Ernie Bain!! They gave us a lot of their time, coaching us towards a great hockey season, with lots of hockey games, fun, excitement and we're proud to say a fair many wins! We sure will try to remember our off-sides next year. Thank-you so much Rick & Ernie. A special thanks to Wendy Wells for always being there to feed us and everything else you did! Thanks. We would also like to thank Jasco Drug Mart for sponsoring us! The new sweaters you gave us, we were proudly. It was hard to return them for the new tykes next year but we did and we'll always remember our year as the Jasco Drug Mart Tykes as a "great" one. THE JASCO DRUG MART TYKES 89/90.

THE FAMILY

of the late Lorne Ray would like to thank family, friends and neighbours for their love and support during the recent loss of a beloved husband and father. The many cards, flowers, donations and contributions of food and other things needed were greatly appreciated. A very special thanks to all those ladies who came to the house, answered the phone, made sure there was someone there at all times and organized the lunch at the Legion in Cardiff. Also a special thank you to John, Penny, John O'Donnell, Bill Bandy, the ambulance crew, Doctors Lehman and McEnery, Janice Maxwell, Aileen Gilbert, Joan Barret and the staff at North Hastings and District Hospital. Thank you also to Tim, Bill and Tom at Wiggins Funeral Home for their guidance and support when it was so desperately needed. Thanks also to Rev. David Smith. We certainly realized quickly how much Lorne was loved and respected by everyone he touched. It is at a time like this that words do not often seem enough, but again a very warm thank you to everyone who was there for us. Pat, Kelly and Jodi.

IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORY of my husband Donald "Bud" Stansbury who passed away May 1st, 1989.

I think of you in silence and I often speak your name. All I have is lovely memories of you, and your picture in a frame.

My heart still aches with sadness

33-CA-9

IN MEMORIAM

My silent tears still flow
For what it meant to lose you
No one will ever know.

Today, tomorrow, My whole life through,
I will always remember your love.

Sadly missed by your wife,

The Sweetheart Prayer —

IN MEMORY of a loving husband Titus Charles, who passed away April 29, 1979. Dear heavenly father up above,
Please protect the one I love,
Always keep him safe and sound,
No matter where or when he's found,
Help him to know, help him to see,
That I love him and he loves me,
Keep us now, Keep us forever,
Happy, loving and always together.

Sadly missed, but not forgotten by his loving wife, Hazel M. Titus.

DETERLING:

In loving memory of a dear wife, mother and grandmother, Martha, who left us one year ago, April 27, 1989.

God looked around His garden, and found an empty space

He then looked upon this earth, and saw your tired face
He put His arms around you, and lifted you to rest

God's Garden must be beautiful, He only takes the best.

He knew what you were suffering.

He knew that you were in pain

He knew that you would never get well on this earth again.

He saw the road was getting rough, and the hills were hard to climb

So He closed your worried eyes, and whispered peace be thine.

It broke our hearts to lose you mom, but you didn't go alone,
For part of us went with you, the day God called you home.

Remembered always by Ted and family.
